How to Build an Information Security Industry "At Home" - The Definite Manual - An

Analysis (2022-10-25 22:28)

Dear blog readers,

I’ve decided to make sure of my notes on the information security industry publicly accessible which I produced while I was studying in the Netherlands circa 2003-2006 with the idea to share my knowledge and expertise in the field and with the idea to motivate a lot of folks who remember my work back then which you can check out [2]here.

Sample screenshots of my notes while I was studying in the Netherlands circa 2003-2006 on the information security industry with the idea to dominate it:

Conducting marketing research on benchmarking against the "companies of the day" is exciting task, and not surprisingly one that requires quite some psychological imagination.

Key decision makers -- Fortune 500 C-level leaders acting as the audience - who read hard cover business press, be it due to its actual value or lifestyle needs......

The following initiative that's originally consisting of both hard cover and online security ads is about to get professionally commissioned, but anyway I feel there's nothing wrong in sharing the draft images, and providing you with relevant analysis of 12 hard cover security ads I came across to in the major business publications. Don't just aim to reach as many eyeballs as possible, try to narrow down your ambitions to the key ones, and accept the challenge of making them go further. Enjoy and share

Market for Software Vulnerabilit urpose. Provide interested parties with the pinions, recommendations and insights of leading curity researchers, on the current, emerging, a future state of commercializing vuln. research. No among the three infomediaries purchasing vulnera lities, only one was professional enough to consider my solicitation to participate. It's not always about market share, but a heart share as well, hope they get it. Enjoy this online panel, feel absolutely obliged to comment and keep the discussion going.

Key ideas ① break the ice between researchers themselves, and the industry ② provide the masses of knowledgeable fellows not having the time, resources, perhaps even desire to purchase a couple thousand bucks ticket to attend a security con ③ to prove the diversified quality researchers background, and break the domination of the Anglo-Saxon stereotype ④ pass the virtual microphone and provide everyone with the opportunity to commu their points, as professionally as possible

⑤ Break the myth of Infosec indus having to do with vulnerabilities only

Meet the folks I'm about to "interrogate and constructively confront with - Wish I could stay in my pants and acts as a meeting facilitator only -- too much to say!

① 3APA3A - security.nnov.ru — the infamous Russian security researcher whose strategic background, geographic position and insider view of the problem, you wouldn't hear at any con. Russia, the waning super-power even after the end of the USSR, the place where according to the mass media 0day exploits get built and ~~traded~~ swallowed for breakfast.
Let's find out how come!

② [illegible] Rollins - the true example of the early [illegible] intermittent press and its habit of over-repeating itself with yesterday's "heros of the day".

Inside the KillNet Crowd-Sourced DDoS Attack Campaign Targeting International Web Sites - An OSINT Analysis (2022-10-25 22:28)

KILLNET PRODUCTION
FUCK NATO

I’ve decided to take a deeper look inside the currently ongoing crowd-sourced DDoS infrastructure platform known as KillNet where multiple pro-Russian groups including various Pro-Ukraine groups are basically soliciting users internationally to "donate" their bandwidth to a central command and control server under the operation of KillNet botnet operators that further orchestrate the actual Target List and the actual DDoS attack campaigns.

What’s new here? Nothing really as crowd-sourcing DDoS attacks has been around for a while.

It doesn’t take a rocket scientist to entice a thousand users into installing a rogue and bogus crowd-sourced DDoS attack application under a central management command of KillNet who will be responsible for issuing managing and updating the Targets List that also includes the actual launching of the DDoS attack campaigns.

- A Guide To The Scene (2022-10-25 22:28)

Hello everyone,

Are you enjoying my new layout? I’ve finally managed to find a decent layout that’s worth the efforts for my blog and I think that you’ll enjoy it.

[2]Grab the Torrent.

Who needs a motto of some sort? Check out the following:

- "Setting them straight since the early days of humankind!"

- "If it’s going to be massive it better be good".

- "Only the enlightened".

- "The Third World war will be fought with sticks and stones. Our war will be fought with cyber sticks and stones".

- "You shall obfuscate. I shall deobfuscate".

- "Takes you back doesn’t it?"

- "Cybercrime is largely driven by the average time for which it takes to collectively and fully satisfy the botnet masters for the time it takes to build a botnet and maintain it online".

- "When we’re back on top, back on top in January, 2009, I say that loads.cc, loads.cccccc and it ain’t that aspiring as it seems, you’re aggregating botnets in September, face the abuse department’s music in June, but I know I’m going to see your IPs again, cause this fine cybercrime ecosystem, it just keeps spinning around."

The reason for using it? I truly want to present as much information as possible in a much more structured way than before and I finally found a suitable template for this purpose.

In this all-in-one blog post I’ll attempt and I’ll do my best to present the true story behind my blog which you can by the way download in a full offline reading mode here with the idea to present my true story since December, 2005 when I originally launched it while working at https://astalavista.com as a Managing Director.

5.3 Understanding Intelligence Sources

The availability of the longitudinal data (the IOCs collected over a span of 13 years) also enables us to investigate the qualities of the indicators produced by different sources and their timeliness against new threats, as reported below.

Timeliness. Using the aforementioned attack clusters (see Table 7), we analyzed the distribution of the articles first reporting the attacks over different blogs, as shown in Figure 8b. We found that 10 blogs were responsible for the first report of 60% the clusters (each cluster likely to be a campaign). For example, the blog Dancho Danchev first report 12 clusters, each time involving 45 IOCs on average, which later also showed up on other blogs.

The Rise of Malware as a Service (MaaS)

February 18, 2013 · botnets, images, Security, Software

- authors Pierluigi Paganini

The internet is becoming a mine for criminals that is an easy way to access to any kind of resources or to arrange a cyber attacks, a cyber espionage campaign or complex banking and identity fraud.

What is very frightening is the simplicity with which it is possible to acquire any kind of criminal services in the underground and the creativity of cyber criminals that are able to offer a business model that is both efficient and inexpensive. This is especially true of the Russian criminal underground which is the one that is considered the most active globally.

In the last month various malicious campaigns have been launched by cyber criminals with specific intent to infect the largest number of machines composing dangerous botnets. The availabilities of a great number of infected machines translates into the availability of valuable resources and services to be marketed by cybercrime organizations.

Cyber criminals are offering malware-infected hosts, also known as "loads", in a new business model that proposes the monetization of botnet activities through renting of the compromised systems. Of course the services offered are totally customizable, clients can choose the type of malware that infects the victims and their geographic location, it is possible rent US-based malware infected hosts or machine in European Union.

Security expert Dancho Danchev in a post on Webroot threat blog revealed newly launched underground service offering access to thousands of malware-infected machine for unsettlingly low prices, a thousand US-based hosts costs $200 meanwhile for a thousand EU-based hosts price varies between $60/$120, and the price for a thousand international mix type of hosts is $20.

The different prices applied are calculated based on purchasing power and long-term value of a malware infected host, US users are considered by cybercriminal organization the most wealthy, the pricing policy varies, so in many cases the malicious services are sold to US users at higher prices. I add that probably there are also other considerations behind cost evaluation such as specificity of the demand in specific areas and cost to maintain alive botnet in countries in which cyber security is more responsive.

Dancho Danchev a couple of years ago conducted an interesting study on botnet renting:

> "The logical shift from static pricing lists, to the embracing of multiple pricing schemes such as price discrimination (differentiated pricing), or penetration pricing, naturally resulted in different prices for different targeted groups."

What are the principal uses of thousands of infected hosts?

Typically the criminals are interested in the arrangement of cyber frauds and so large number of machines is used for launching related

Crimeware gets worse - How to avoid being robbed by your PC

The malware threat to Windows computers continues to get worse. So much so, there's a new term to describe malicious software that transfers money from online accounts at financial services companies - crimeware.

Last week, an article at Technology Review told about a construction firm that had $447,000 taken out of their bank account by crimeware software on one of their computers. What makes this story particularly interesting is that the unnamed bank employed one time passwords.

Perhaps you've seen the small key fobs that display a new password every minute. If you don't have the key fob, you can't logon. But the computer was already infected and was being used by a legitimate user. Retina scanners would not have prevented the crime.

While the well-verified user was logged on, making legitimate transfers, the crimeware software generated 27 transfers in the space of a few minutes. According the firms president "They not only got into my system here, they were able to ascertain how much they could draw, so they drew the limit". It can't get any worse.

What to do?

Dancho Danchev suggests setting "daily, weekly or monthly account transaction limits", assuming your financial institution allows it. He also suggests being notified of transactions via SMS.

Another possibility is creating, up-front, a list of valid payees so that your financial institution won't pay anyone not on the list. I know a company that does this and it protected them from forged paper payroll checks.

Of course, the bank should flag suspicious activity such as: a group transfers just under $10,000, any large outflow of money, a collection of transfers to new, first-time payees or multiple transfers from a new IP address. Maybe someday.

This puts forth the discussion of how now, as organizations continue to leverage more and more diverse types of cloud-based services, a security mindset needs to be at the center of any cloud strategy.

But when it comes to your computer, there is one obviously best solution.

Do online banking from Linux using Firefox.

You can run Linux on pretty much any computer from a CD, a USB flash drive, an SD card or a Compact Flash card.

Linux is free. You can download any of dozens of different versions (called "distributions") in ISO format and burn them to a CD.

Sony PlayStation site victim of SQL-injection attack

Early Wednesday, antivirus vendor Sophos reported that some visitors to the Sony PlayStation site may have been prompted to download an antivirus scanner.

Pages promoting the PlayStation games SingStar Pop and God of War contained SQL-injected code. Visitors to those specific game pages would see a fake antivirus scan, then a message that their computer was infected with different viruses and Trojan horses. Warned, the user would then be asked to purchase the scanner to remove the bogus malware.

The injected code linking to the scanner has since been removed.

Security researcher Dancho Danchev said in his ZDNet blog that Sony wasn't alone. It was one of 794 domains hit in the latest automated SQL-injection campaign using a multilayer fast-flux superstructure built around coldwop.com. Over the last 90 days, Google reports that 794 domains have been infected with code pointing to that domain. These are legitimate sites with vulnerabilities that allow criminal hackers to inject code pointing to their servers.

With fast-flux, a registered domain name stays the same while its node changes frequently, presumably thwarting any attempts to shut down the server hosting malicious content.

Danchev concludes: "If you don't take care of your Web application vulnerabilities, someone else will."

Web Gang Operating in the Open

By RIVA RICHMOND JAN. 16, 2012

Five men believed to be responsible for spreading a notorious computer worm on Facebook and other social networks — and pocketing several million dollars from online schemes — are hiding in plain sight in St. Petersburg, Russia, according to investigators at Facebook and several independent computer security researchers.

The men live comfortable lives in St. Petersburg — and have frolicked on luxury vacations in places like Monte Carlo, Bali and, earlier this month, Turkey, according to photographs posted on social network sites — even though their identities have been known for years to Facebook, computer security investigators and law enforcement officials.

One member of the group, which is popularly known as the Koobface gang, has regularly broadcast the coordinates of its offices by checking in on Foursquare, a location-based social network, and posting the news to Twitter. Photographs on Foursquare also show other suspected members of the group working on Macs in a loftlike room that looks like offices used by tech start-ups in cities around the world.

Beginning in July 2008, the Koobface gang aimed at Web users with invitations to watch a funny or sexy video. Those curious enough to click the link got a message to update their computer's Flash software, which begins the download of the Koobface malware. Victims' computers are drafted into a "botnet," or network of infected PCs, and are sent official-looking advertisements of fake antivirus software and their Web searches are also hijacked and the clicks delivered to unscrupulous marketers. The group made money from people who bought the bogus software and from unsuspecting advertisers.

The security software firm Kaspersky Labs has estimated the network includes 400,000 to 800,000 PCs worldwide at its height in 2010. Victims are often unaware their machines have been compromised.

The Koobface gang's freedom underscores how hard it is to apprehend international computer criminals, even when identities are known. These groups tend to operate in countries where they can work unmolested by the local authorities, and where cooperation with United States and European law enforcement agencies is poor. Meanwhile, Western law enforcement is awash in computer crime and lacks the resources and skilled manpower to tackle it effectively, especially when evidence putting individuals' fingers on keyboards must be collected abroad.

On Tuesday, Facebook plans to announce that it will begin sharing information about the group and how to fight them with security researchers and other Internet companies. It believes public namings can make it harder for such groups to operate and send a message to the criminal underground.

None of the men have been charged with a crime and no law enforcement agencies have confirmed they are under investigation.

Spammers unleash DIY phone number slurping web tool

Well it is Valentine's Day... How else are you going to get those digits?

By John Leyden 14 Feb 2013 at 17:03

Mobile spammers have released a DIY phone number harvesting tool, but instead of advertising it solely on criminals-only online hangouts, they're trying to flog it out in the open.

The availability of the utility turns the simple act of submitting a mobile number to a website something that might lead to the receipt of more SMS (text message) spam.

A new version of the phone number harvesting tool crawls the web and indexes mobile numbers, phone ID numbers, the names of the owner, and the associated mobile operator - among other information. Users of the tool can choose which country they want to target.

The harvested information is later used for various malicious and fraudulent purposes.

Key features of the tool include automatic recognition of Russian and Ukrainian mobile phone providers (based on its initial target market), indexing based on a region and city for both Russia and Ukraine, multi-threaded software allowing up to 100 "indexing streams", as well as an option to collect only numbers attached to a particular mobile provider.

"Cybercriminals and spammers are not strangers to the concept of market segmentation," explained Dancho Danchev, a security researcher at Webroot, in a blog post.

"Just like true marketers, the developer of the tool has included the option to choose a specific region within the available countries, with the idea to assist in the inevitable malicious and fraudulent activity that will result from this phone number harvesting activity."

Danchev advises surfers to double-check whether any website that requests your phone number is actually listing it on the web. The phone number harvesting tool has yet to crawl through sites that require authorisation or spread outside Russia and the Ukraine, he said, but future versions are likely to expanding indexing capabilities and geographical reach, Danchev warned.

The DIY phone number harvesting tool is an example of a wider trend of selling tools that once were exclusively available to sophisticated cybercriminals to less elite cybercrooks though underground forums. Services that offers a means to launch managed SMS flooding and phone ring flooding have recently become available through these forums. Both managed SMS flooding and phone ring flooding are pitched as a means to "take care of your competitor's phone lines" or a DDoS attack on phones instead of websites. However, these services might easily lend themselves to helping along more ambitious scams, such as flooding out a bank's call centres to prevent early reports of card fraud cash-out operations, according to Webroot.

"By starting to advertise these very same malicious (DIY) tools and services on publicly accessible forums, they're proving that they're willing to sacrifice a certain degree of OPSEC (Operational Security) for the sake of growing their business model and attracting new customers," Danchev reports. ®

Customizable Mobile Number Harvesting Service Found on Underground Market

The information can be used for SMS spam campaigns

Security experts have come across a new mobile number harvesting service that allows users to fully customize the type of information they want to collect. The collected information can then be utilized to drive SMS spam campaigns that rely on specialized services.

According to the service's operators, it takes up to 12 hours to harvest between 1,000 and 35,000 phone numbers, and it takes between 72 and 86 hours if the customer wants over 50,000 numbers based on certain criteria.

The individuals that advertise the service accept payment via WebMoney, which shows that experts might have been right when they said that cybercriminals might slowly migrate back to WebMoney now that Liberty Reserve was out of the picture.

"We expect to continue observing an increase in vendors offering cybercrime-as-a-service solutions with vertical market integration in mind, in an attempt by the cybercriminals operating them to occupy an even bigger market share within the TDoS and the SMS spam market segments," Danchev explained.

Mass website hacking tool alerts to dangers of Google dorks

Google dorks are not geeks who love the internet-related services and products provider. Google dorks are akin to super-specific searches, which attackers have been known to take advantage of in attempts to expose vulnerable websites.

Cyber crime researcher Dancho Danchev recently blogged about a mass, do-it-yourself (DIY) website hacking tool making the rounds that takes advantage of those Google dorks.

"The proxy supporting tool has been purposely designed to allow automatic mass websites reconnaissance for the purpose of launching SQL injection attacks against those websites that are vulnerable," Danchev wrote.

SQL stands for structured query language and is programming terminology designed for managing data. SQL injection typically involves an attacker inputting SQL statements into an entry field that will force the system to execute potentially malicious commands.

"Once a compromise takes place, the attacker is in a perfect position to inject malicious scripts on the affected sites, potentially exposing their users to malicious client-side exploits serving attacks," according to Danchev.

Danchev wrote that an escalating number of DIY tools circulating the internet may open the door for novice attackers, but Barry Shteiman, director of security strategy with Imperva, told SCMagazine.com on Tuesday that it is the Google dorks that should be raising alarms.

"The reason Google dorks have gotten so popular is because they create the threat landscape of finding targets," Shteiman said, explaining that he regularly uses Google dorks in his research to see the scale of a particular issue. "If I know of an exploit, Google will find those targets."

The problem is that people want Google to index their websites so it can be found in a regular search, Shteiman said. He explained that website owners can, and should, mask things about their sites by removing certain tags and not letting the public know what kinds of systems run under the hood.

"It's a huge a problem," Shteiman said. "I believe that most hackers use these techniques because they are looking for easy money. Why would I go into a website and start digging when I can do it the other way around. You're reversing the wheel and making your life very easy."

Shteiman most recently took advantage of Google dorks when researching an exploit in certain versions of vBulletin. He discovered that 35,000 websites using the proprietary internet message board software were vulnerable to a flaw that allowed hackers to create new admin accounts.

Cybercrime service automates creation of fake scanned IDs, other verification docs

The service produces high-quality fake scans that can be used in fraud attacks to impersonate victims, Group-IB researchers said

By Lucian Constantin
Romania Correspondent, CSO
AUG 27, 2013 8:00 AM PT

A new Web-based service for cybercriminals automates the creation of fake scanned documents that can help fraudsters bypass the identity verification processes used by some banks, e-commerce businesses and other online services providers, according to researchers from Russian cybercrime investigations firm Group-IB.

The service can generate scanned copies of passports, ID cards and driver's licenses from different countries for identities supplied by the service users, fake scanned utility bills from various companies, as well as fake scanned copies of banking statements and credit cards issued by a large number of banks, said Andrey Komarov, head of international projects at Group-IB, via email.

It is common practice for banks, payment and money transfer providers, online gambling sites and other types of businesses that engage in money transactions via the Internet to ask their customers for scanned copies of documents in order to prove their identities or verify their physical addresses, especially when their anti-fraud departments detect suspicious account activity.

[Related: 4 places to find cybersecurity talent in your own organization]

Using image manipulation software to change the photo, name and other details on a scanned ID is obviously not a new practice, but services like the one identified by Group-IB that automate the whole process and produce high-quality results are new on the cybercriminal market, Komarov said.

According to Group-IB, the service is provided through a website hosted on a server in Germany. The domain name was registered in May, but the service was launched in mid-August, Komarov said.

Independent cybercrime researcher Dancho Danchev described a very similar service in a July blog post; however, Komarov could not confirm whether it is the same one because there was no reference to the service's domain name in Danchev's report.

The service found by Group-IB has templates for passports, ID cards and driver's licences for the U.S., Canada, Russia, the U.K., Germany, the Netherlands and other European Union countries. It also has templates for bank statements, credit cards -- front and back -- and utility bills from banks and utility companies operating in those countries.

The templates are for documents and cards that show signs of use and are scanned at different angles and different positions on the canvas. This makes the resulting image appear more authentic.

The Rise of Malware as a Service (MaaS)

- authors Pierluigi Paganini

The Internet is becoming a mine for criminals that is an easy way to access to any kind of resources or to arrange a cyber attacks, a cyber espionage campaign or complex banking and identity fraud.

What is very frightening is the simplicity with which it is possible to acquire any kind of criminal services in the underground and the creativity of cyber criminals that are able to offer a business model that is both efficient and inexpensive. This is especially true of the Russian criminal underground which is the one that is considered the most active globally.

In the last month various malicious campaigns have been launched by cyber criminals with specific intent to infect the largest number of machines composing dangerous botnets. The availabilities of a great number of infected machines translates into the availability of valuable resources and services to be marketed by cybercrime organizations.

Cyber criminals are offering malware-infected-hosts, also known as "loads", in a new business model that proposes the monetization of botnet activities through renting of the compromised systems. Of course the services offered are totally customizable, clients can choose the type of malware that infects the victims and their geographic location, it is possible rent US-based malware infected hosts or machine in European Union.

Security expert Dancho Danchev in a post on Webroot threat blog revealed newly launched underground service offering access to thousands of malware-infected machine for unsettlingly low prices, a thousand US-based hosts costs $200 meanwhile for a thousand EU-based hosts price varies between $60/$120, and the price for a thousand international mix type of hosts is $20.

The malware threat to Windows computers continues to get worse. So much so, there's a new term to describe malicious software that transfers money from online accounts at financial services companies - crimeware.

Last week, an article at Technology Review told about a construction firm that had $447,000 taken out of their bank account by crimeware software on one of their computers. What makes this story particularly interesting is that the unnamed bank employed one time passwords.

Perhaps you've seen the small key fobs that display a new password every minute. If you don't have the key fob, you can't logon. But the computer was already infected and was being used by a legitimate user. Retina scanners would not have prevented the crime.

While the well-verified user was logged on, making legitimate transfers, the crimeware software generated 27 transfers in the space of a few minutes. According the firms president "They not only got into my system here, they were able to ascertain how much they could draw, so they drew the limit". It can't get any worse.

What to do?

Dancho Danchev suggests setting "daily, weekly or monthly account transaction limits", assuming your financial institution allows it. He also suggests being notified of transactions via SMS.

Fake CNN Alert Still Spreading Malware

By Gregg Keizer

Computerworld

The massive attack that has infected PCs by tricking users into clicking links in fake messages from CNN.com shows little sign of ending soon, security researchers say.

According to MX Logic Inc. , spam posing as CNN.com Top 10 lists peaked at close to 11 million messages per hour early Thursday, but remained at high volumes throughout the day Friday. The Colorado security vendor said it had been tracking an average of 8 million messages per hour since midnight.

MX Logic's vice president of information security, Sam Masiello , called the trend "a very slow, but steady decline" from the 11 a.m. Mountain Time peak the day before.

[Further reading: How the new age of antivirus software will protect your PC]

Masiello also said that the spam has changed since attacks were first launched on Tuesday. "We've also seen several morphs of this spam over the past couple of days," he said in an entry posted on the MX Logic blog Friday . Where the messages once trumpeted " CNN .com Daily Top 10" in the subject heading and linked to a single filename on malware-hosting sites, now the spam sports a subject reading "CNN Alerts: My Custom Alert" and uses a variety of filenames in the malicious URL.

"This is likely in response to all of the media attention and awareness that has been brought up over the past couple of days," Masiello speculated.

Also on Friday, Websense Inc. reported that its researchers had seen the attack mutating, with the spam subject heading not only touting "CNN Alerts: My Custom Alert," but also using legitimate news stories culled from CNN to make the messages more convincing.

Users who clicked on the "FULL STORY" link in the message were redirected to a fake CNN site, where they were told they needed to download an update to Flash Player, Adobe System Inc. 's popular Internet media player, to view a video clip from CNN.

Websense also said it had spotted traces of the campaign in blog spam.

MX Logic added that it had seen the URLs in the spam lead to legitimate domains that had probably been compromised, and named a U.K.-based roofing company as an example.

Sony PlayStation site victim of SQL-injection attack

Early Wednesday, antivirus vendor Sophos reported that some visitors to the Sony PlayStation site may have been prompted to download an antivirus scanner.

Pages promoting the PlayStation games SingStar Pop and God of War contained SQL-injected code. Visitors to those specific game pages would see a fake antivirus scan, then a message that their computer was infected with different viruses and Trojan horses. Warned, the user would then be asked to purchase the scanner to remove the bogus malware.

The injected code linking to the scanner has since been removed.

Security researcher Dancho Danchev said in his ZDNet blog that Sony wasn't alone. It was one of 794 domains hit in the latest automated SQL-injection campaign using a multilayer fast-flux superstructure built around coldwop.com. Over the last 90 days, Google reports that 794 domains have been infected with code pointing to that domain. These are legitimate sites with vulnerabilities that allow criminal hackers to inject code pointing to their servers.

Security experts have come across a new mobile number harvesting service that allows users to fully customize the type of information they want to collect. The collected information can then be utilized to drive SMS spam campaigns that rely on specialized services.

According to the service's operators, it takes up to 12 hours to harvest between 1,000 and 35,000 phone numbers, and it takes between 72 and 86 hours if the customer wants over 50,000 numbers based on certain criteria.

The individuals that advertise the service accept payment via WebMoney, which shows that experts might have been right when they said that cybercriminals might slowly migrate back to WebMoney now that Liberty Reserve was out of the picture.

"We expect to continue observing an increase in vendors offering cybercrime-as-a-service solutions with vertical market integration in mind, in an attempt by the cybercriminals operating them to occupy an even bigger market share within the TDoS and the SMS spam market segments," Danchev explained.

Fake CNN Alert Still Spreading Malware

By Gregg Keizer

Computerworld

The massive attack that has infected PCs by tricking users into clicking links in fake messages from CNN.com shows little sign of ending soon, security researchers say.

According to MX Logic Inc. , spam posing as CNN.com Top 10 lists peaked at close to 11 million messages per hour early Thursday, but remained at high volumes throughout the day Friday. The Colorado security vendor said it had been tracking an average of 8 million messages per hour since midnight.

MX Logic's vice president of information security, Sam Masiello , called the trend "a very slow, but steady decline" from the 11 a.m. Mountain Time peak the day before.

Masiello also said that the spam has changed since attacks were first launched on Tuesday. "We've also seen several morphs of this spam over the past couple of days," he said in an entry posted on the MX Logic blog Friday . Where the messages once trumpeted " CNN .com Daily Top 10" in the subject heading and linked to a single filename on malware-hosting sites, now the spam sports a subject reading "CNN Alerts: My Custom Alert" and uses a variety of filenames in the malicious URL.

The service produces high-quality fake scans that can be used in fraud attacks to impersonate victims, Group-IB researchers said

By Lucian Constantin
Romania Correspondent, CSO

A new Web-based service for cybercriminals automates the creation of fake scanned documents that can help fraudsters bypass the identity verification processes used by some banks, e-commerce businesses and other online services providers, according to researchers from Russian cybercrime investigations firm Group-IB.

The service can generate scanned copies of passports, ID cards and driver's licenses from different countries for identities supplied by the service users, fake scanned utility bills from various companies, as well as fake scanned copies of banking statements and credit cards issued by a large number of banks, said Andrey Komarov, head of international projects at Group-IB, via email.

It is common practice for banks, payment and money transfer providers, online gambling sites and other types of businesses that engage in money transactions via the Internet to ask their customers for scanned copies of documents in order to prove their identities or verify their physical addresses, especially when their anti-fraud departments detect suspicious account activity.

C&C ARCHITECTURE

Compared with the complex C&C architecture of the Storm, WALEDAC, and DOWNAD botnets, the KOOBFACE C&C infrastructure is very basic. It only consisted of infected nodes and C&C domains that used HTTP as its communication protocol.

This simplistic C&C approach is, of course, very vulnerable to takedowns. After several KOOBFACE C&C takedown attempts initiated by Internet service providers (ISPs) and members of the security industry,[3] the KOOBFACE gang realized the need for a more robust C&C infrastructure. Thus, on July 19, 2009, the KOOBFACE writers implemented a new C&C architecture that involved the use of proxy nodes to provide redundancy and to improve the survivability of their C&C should another takedown be attempted.[4]

A few days after the new KOOBFACE C&C infrastructure was implemented, the botnet was seen inserting a message (see below) for one of the security researchers tracking the malware's domain activities.

Our team, so often called "Koobface Gang", expresses high gratitude for the help in bug fixing, researches and documentation for our software to:

- Kaspersky Lab for the name of Koobface and 25 millionth malicious program award;
- Dancho Danchev (http://ddanchev.blogspot.com) who worked hard every day especially on our First Software & Architecture version, writing lots of e-mails to different hosting companies and structures to take down our Command-and-Control (C&C) servers, and of course analyzing software under VM Ware;
- Trend Micro (http://trendmicro.com), especially personal thanks Jonell Baltazar, Joey Costoya, and Ryan Flores who had released a very cool document (with three parts!) describing all our mistakes we've ever made;
- Cisco for their 3rd place to our software in their annual "working groups awards";
- Soren Siebert with his great article;
- Hundreds of users who send us logs, crash reports, and wish-lists.

In fact, it was a really hard year. We've made many efforts to improve our software. Thanks to Facebook's security team - the guys made us move ahead. And we've moved. And will move. Improving their security system.

By the way, we did not have a cent using Twitter's traffic. But many security issues tell the world we did. They are wrong.

As many people know, "virus" is something awful, which crashes computers, steals credential information as good as all passwords and credit cards. Our software did not ever steal credit card or online bank information, passwords or any other confidential data. And WILL NOT EVER. As for the crashes... We are really sorry. We work on it :)

Wish you a good luck in new year and... Merry Christmas to you!

Always yours, "Koobface Gang".

   - to specify the assurance process by which the Company and the Contractor can confidently rely on each other's advice, performance and management information.

2. General Provisions

   The Parties will take every opportunity to work together to promote the understanding and implementation of services under this Agreement. The Contractor has primary responsibility of the delivery of services under this Agreement to the Company.

   Subject to the terms and conditions of this Agreement, the Company hereby engages the Contractor as an independent contractor to perform the services set forth herein, and the Contractor hereby accepts such engagement.

3. Service Delivery, Term of the Agreement and Compensation

   The principles and values governing the relationship between the Company and the Contractor are set out in the Exhibit A, attached to this Core Agreement, being its integral part. The Contractor takes the responsibility to provide the Company with the estimates, which is later attached as Exhibit A of the present Agreement. The Exhibit A shall define the Contractor's duties, term of engagement, compensation and provisions for payment thereof. These provisions may be negotiated and amended in writing from time to time, or supplemented with subsequent estimates for services to be rendered by the Contractor and agreed to by the Company, and which collectively are hereby incorporated by reference.

4. Reimburse of Expenses

   The Company undertakes to pay all taxes accrued in connection with money transfer. The Contractor shall pay money transfer charges from his/her commission for payment processing operation, however, the Company agrees to reimburse a part of expenses which are incurred in connection with money transfer by Western Union or MoneyGram systems (should the money transfer charges exceed 5%, i.e. commission for payment processing operation). The above difference will be automatically added to the base salary of the Contractor and paid once per month together with the base salary. A 1099 Tax Form will be provided at the end of the year. The Contractor only carries the responsibility of taxation of their base salary and commission pay, minus transfer fees. Necessary bank statements, Western Union and Money Gram receipts need to be attached.

5. Reporting to the Company

   The Contractor shall present to the Company monthly project plans, progress reports and a final results report summarizing all activities conducted by Contractor to date on request from the Company. A comprehensive final results report shall be due at the conclusion of the project and shall be submitted to the Company as a confidential written report at such time. The results report shall be presented in such form and contain such information and data as is reasonably requested by the Company.

Employee Registration - Step 4

I'm feeling uncomfortable giving you my online banking details. Why do you need it? I'm worrying about unauthorized access to my bank account.

We require online banking access to monitor deposits coming from our clients. It saves you much time and increase your rating in our system:

- There is no need to check your bank account every hour during transactions, your personal supervisor will do it instead of you! You'll be informed the same minute funds arrive.
- No need to send us your bank account statement every week (maybe 2-3 times a week).
- We trust you much more, you'll receive money bonuses and more transactions!

It is absolutely safe and legal. We guarantee that all personal details will stay safe. Please read our Privacy Policy. NOTE: IT'S IMPOSSIBLE TO MAKE ANY TRANSFERS USING ONLINE ACCESS. If you have no online access to your bank account, you should contact your bank and activate this service. It will take less than 10 minutes.

* At this moment we require online access to your bank account optionally but strongly recommend to apply with online banking details. NOTE:

- agents with online access will have higher priority on getting new tasks (amounts are also larger)
- agents with online access receive $100 BONUS to base salary every month

Why are you gathering so much information about applicants? Such attention especially to bank account details puts me on guard.

In fact that modern financial system is a complex instrument, which controls financial streams. The problem is that any transfer may be delayed (from 1 to 5 days) but it is unacceptable for our business. Transaction should be completed by a financial manager the same day money is deposited into the bank account. Otherwise, we risk to lose money, clients, reputation. Analyzing all the details below we'll be able to prepare tasks for every agent individually. Please fill in all the fields carefully to avoid delays while working with your bank. The success of our cooperation depends on the accuracy of entered details! Please be serious.

You are responsible for reliability of this information. If you're having any difficulties please contact your bank.*

People’s Information Warfare vs the U.S DoD Cyber Warfare Doctrine - An Analysis

PEOPLE'S LIBERATION ARMY INFORMATION WARFARE WILLIAM HAGESTAD II

Folks as it’s been a while since I’ve last posted a high-quality post please bare with me while I take the time to catch up with some of the latest developments worth posting an article about and while I try and do my best to return to the usual blogging rhythm typical for me and for the readers who truly know me and appreciate my work and research I sincerely hope that you’ll find this post informative enough and share it.

The best is yet to come.

What's the main difference between a people's information warfare concept including the U.S

DoD cyber warfare doctrine in today's modern world?

We cannot discuss these if we don't compare their cyber warfare approaches next to one another. It's rather ironic situation, since China has built its cyber warfare doctrine based on the research conducted into the topic by U.S military personnel. At a later stage, Chinese military thinkers perceived the combination of Sun Tzu's military strategies in the virtual realm.

Capability matching vs threat acquisition?

China's already reached the unrestricted warfare stage, a phrase when its hacking capabilities empowered Internet users self-mobilize themselves, the U.S DoD is implementing its cyber warfare doctrine, and the rest of the world is whining for yet another password stealer for online games that's phoning back to China.

A little less conversation, a little more action "babe".

Edition

Now that's its becoming increasingly clear that cyber jihad is entering into a "stay tuned for a webcast with your favorite terrorist" stage, what we may witness next is terrorist on sand-proof Segways. Cutting the sarcasm, it's becoming boring the listen to the same song played on a different media device.

Stay tuned!

dent contractor in the world of security blogging cybercrime research and threat intelligence which led me to visit several invite-only conferences including to present at event at an undisclosed location including to actually attract and retain approximatelly 6M page views which is not necessarily bad for a man one operation in terms of running and maintaining my personal Security Blogger for ZDNet (http://www.zdnet.com/blog/security/) Threat Intelligence Analyst for Webroot (https://www.webroot.com/blog/)

Among the primary reasons for coming up with this 97 pages long personal memoir is to empower fellow researchers and security experts including the general public with an in-depth personal account overview of my experience in the security industry's as a teenage hacker enthusiast back in the 90's today's most popular and often cited security blogger threat intelligence analyst and cybercrime researcher internationally and to present a diverse set of high-quality and never-published and discussed before case studies and enriched technical infor-mation and OSINT data on current and emerging cyber attack trends.

The primary goal of the book would be to position my memoir as one of the most popular and often cited personal account of the hacking and the security Scene circa the 90’s through the prism of my teenage hacker experience up to present day in terms of various high-profile and advanced nation-state actors and malicious and fraudulent cyber attack campaigns where the ultimate goal would be to discuss in-depth my experience in the field of security blogging threat intelligence gathering and cybercrime research throughout the past decade.

It used to be a moment in time when “sharing was caring” and with the booming Web 2.0

enterprises and the actual concept numerous new online participants and Web 2.0 darlings started popping up as mushrooms another set of individuals prone to make a change an impact quickly emerged online potentially sharing a treasure trove of personal knowledge into the world of modern technologies including the very basics of information security hacking and

cyber warfare including a newly releases and never-published before research into the area of cybercrime research and the actual process of profiling the bad guys onlines in terms of their actual campaigns and actual malicious infrastructure behind their online campaigns.

Following a series of messages left on the actual C &C (Command and Control) server locations

which were basically greeting me and referencing my research at the time including a series of typosquatted domains using my name at some point in time I managed to actually come up with a proper “Top 10 Things You Didn’t Know About the Koobface Gang” article for ZDNet at the time wheret the botnet masters actually left a message within the C &C (Command and Control) server location basically answering the key points on a point by point basis which was quite a success at the time of monitoring and tracking down the Koobface botnet.

The primary purpose behind the actual release of my personal memoir is to reach out to to a new set of audience and actually elaborate more on my experience and expertise in the field

including to offer a God’s Eye perspective on the current and emerging cybercrime ecosystem

in combination with active case studies and technical material whose purpose is to greatly assist everyone that’s reading this memoir with the idea to provoke you to share it with your friends and colleagues including to actually recommend it to your friends and colleagues.

I wanted to take the time and effort to dedicate this book to my ex-girfriend circa the 90’s Yordanka Ilieva with whom I worked on the infamous https://astalavista.com where I had the privilege to work on the infamous Astalavista Security Group Security Newsletter and received the necessary support and guidance in the context of making this high-quality security publication happen including everyone in the U.S that I know and have worked with in the context of fighting cybercrime where I wanted to say big thanks to everyone who ever approached me and said “keep up the good work” and “keep it coming” in the context of motivating me to continue doing my research and continue to publish high-quality research articles and proper cyber threat actor attribution research and analysis including the following people:

- Ivan Schmid - for being the coolest boss ever in the world and for welcoming me on board at one of the Web’s most popular Web site for hackers circa 2003-2006 where I had the privilege to work as a Managing Director of the portal with my ex-girlfriend circa the 90’s - Yordanka Ilieva while I was studying in the Netherlands.

- Pascal Mittner - for being the second coolest boss ever in the world who I never really had the chance to meet personally but was properly doing my work and where I was actually getting paid to do my work on my way to produce a high-quality newsletter and actually threat intelligence type of brief for ScanSafe at the time which later on got acquired by Cisco research while I was busy watching one of his personal presentations at a major security event circa the 90’s where he had the opportunity to present my research into the field of cybercrime research through his daily publications at his personal blog

research in the field of cybercrime research and for running and maitaining Sunbelt Software chance to meet at RSA Europe 2012 The World is small and infinite and we can definitely make it a better place by doing our work following the basic methodology that an "OSINT conducted today is a tax payer's buck saved somewhere".

It used to be a privilege back in December, 2005 when I originally launched my personal Dan-cho Danchev'Blog - Mind Streams of Information Security Knowledge which quickly emerged as one of the security industry's most popular security publications up to present day where I've managed to attract approximatelly 5.6M page views throughout the past decade and where

I've managed to attract and retain a high-quality audience which basically consists of security researchers members of the U.S Intelligence Community including U.S Law Enforcement including prominent members of the security industry where my personal blog became a daily read for the purpose of setting up the foundations of a successful communication platform for most of the research that I publish online.

Following approximately a decade of active security blogging OSINT analysis and research including threat intelligence research and analysis I’ve managed to gather a loyal audience which greatly contributed to my 11,000 Twitter followers count using my old Twitter account - https://twitter.com/danchodanchev including the active participation of my old Twitter account in a Top Secret GCHQ Program known as "Lovely Horse" where I had the privilege to contribute with knowledge and know-how to the U.S Intelligence Community’s project for using "Open Source for Security" where the ultimate goal was to monitor high-profile hackers and security experts in terms of obtaining access to their research and knowledge.

Throughout the past decade it’s been a personal privilege and an honor to produce hundreds of high-quality and never-published before high-quality cybercrime research and OSINT type of articles where I’m proud to find out that countless and numerous online publications and security and research journals including mainstream security news outlets have referenced or actually written an article about my research and actual research findings.

It used to a moment in time when Digg including Techmeme and let’s don’t forget Technorati were among the primary sourced of traffic and actual content aggregators and syndicating services online which greatly inspired me and motivated me to launch a personal blog which later on became the security industry’s leading and most high-traffic visited and popular security publications online. In that specific moment in time when I originally launched my personal blog daily blogging and actual security research was a daily routine which greatly contributed to the popularity of my personal blog in terms of traffic and the actual acquisition of high-profile and loyal readers across the years which is where I’ve decided to launch my personal Dancho Danchev’s Blog - Mind Streams of Information Security Knowledge blog.

It used to be a perfect moment in time when everything was just beginning to take place in the world of hacking in particular the resurrection and re-emergence of key hacking and security resources and online portals online offering vast access to training and teaching documents and text files including actual security and hacking tools which be easily utilized for both defensive and offensive purposes both for educational purposes only.

With major scene information repositiories and hacking sites going down the landscape greatly re-transformed itself into a commercial landscape re-transforming the scene the way we know it into a commercial paradise in particular the rise of the Threat Intelligence and Virtual CYBERINT marketplace consisting of thousands of active participants sharing data information and knowledge on current and emerging cyber threatsd and cyber threat attack vectors including a multitude of nation-state sponsored and tolerated Cyber Threat Actor adversaries successfully running a huge portion of fraudulent and malicious online campaigns and participating in a multi-million dollar underground Cybercrime Ecosystem.

The year is 1998 and Progenic's Top 100's has just added yet another hacking group's portfolio such as for instance among my favorite hacking and security resources which included at the time - WarIndustries, System7, Blackcode, Progenic. Web Fringe, Neworder and TechnicalWarfare. What was really taking place within the Scene and the Industry at the time? With new hacking and community projects continuing to pop-up on a daily basis it wasn't largely a surprise that a new generation of novice and amateur hackers was just beginning to take place with vast repositiories of tools and tutorials including articles and guides publicly accessible for everyone to take advantage of and most importantly to get in touch with someone and to learn.

What did we managed to achieve throughtout the past decade in terms of innovation development knowledge and data spreading to thousands of novice and experienced users across the globe? Let's take for instance the Threat Intelligence market segment - a pioneering passive and active virtual SIGINT marketplace with hundreds of groups participating including thousands of malicious and fraudulent online actors utilizing and relying on basic quality assurance and malicious economies of scale type of market-driven factors to scale their cybercrime and fraud-driven operations online prompting a systematic and nation-state driven response to a growing set of economic and financial terrorism type of online activity largely provoked by a specific set of Russian and Eastern European online adversaries. Among my favorite personal

Web site bookmarks at the time were the NBA.com including various other X-Files and related UFO-themed video and photo archive type of personal Web sites. Believe it or not among the early basics of Technical Collection that I managed to inquire were throught the public and proprietary research published by a company called iDefense which was basically always there to provide the necessary intelligence on current and future cyber groups and current and future cyber actors which greatly inspired me on my way to do my research in the field of OSINT (Open Source Intelligence) and later on Cybercrime Research and Threat Intelligence gathering. Who were the hackers and what were they up to? What tools did they use? How famous were they at the time? How did they manage to achieve all of this? Remember the U.S-China crashed airplance skirmish? If it’s going to be massive it better be good

What this incident clearly showcased at the time is the possible offensive cyber warfare scenario where U.S based and China-based hackers actually popped-up online to defend and actually launch attacks against each other potentially signifying one of the first major international cyber incidents at the time. With TextFiles.com additions continuing to pop-up among the first and most notable sections that truly made me an impression and actually inspired me to get involved in the world of Hacking and basically the Scene was the Anarchy and Phreaking and Hacking sections next to the daily visits to Progenic.com Top100 list of hacking and security Web sites to actually catch up with the votes and check the new additions to the list to potentially obtain various hacking tools and trojan horses futher motivating me to work with them and potentially show them and share them with some of my closest friends of the time circa the 90’s for the purpose of attempting to trick irc.dal.net users from various channels including #gay and #lesbians into accepting the latest bogus "screensaver" while exploiting a common flaw in the actual mIRC client where you could easily make it look like that the actual user is receiving an image which in reality was actually an executable part of the server client of a popular trojan horse release at the time.

It used to be a moment in time when “sharing was caring” and with the booming Web 2.0 enterprises and the actual concept numerous new online participants and Web 2.0 darlings

cybercrime research and the actual process of profiling the bad guys online in terms of their actual campaigns and actual malicious infrastructure behind their online campaigns.

It used to be a personal privilege back in December, 2005 when I originally launched my personal Dancho Danchev's Blog Mind Streams of Information Security Knowledge blog which quickly attracted a high-quality and relevant audience which is currently one of the security industry's most popular and relevant security hacking OSINT and threat intelligence includ-ing cybercrime research type of gathering online publications where I've continued to publish and post high-quality and never-publshed before and released research and analysis articles.

At some point in time I got practically used to getting referenced and quoted by mainstream news media in terms of my research which greatly motivated an inspired me to continue doing

my research an to actually attempt to inspire other researchers and readers to continue reading and visiting my blog on a daily basis where I owe everyone a big deal of thanks for the daily visits and for actually bothering to read my articles and actually go through my research at the time up to present day.

It used to be a moment in time when we used to "rock the boat". With or without the drinks.

Following a successful career as a hacker enthusiast during the 90’s and a successful management and operation of one of the World’s leading portals for hackers and security experts which is https://astalavista.com for a period of three years circa 2003-2006 when I originally decided to launch one of the security industry’s leading publication which is my personal blog - https://ddanchev.blogspot.com I managed to somehow land a successful career as an independent contractor in the world of security blogging cybercrime research and threat intelligence which led me to visit several invite-only conferences including to present at event at an undisclosed location including to actually attract and retain approximatelly 6M page views which is not necessarily bad for a man one operation in terms of running and maintaining my personal blog for a period of 12 years.

Among the primary reasons for coming up with this 97 pages long personal memoir is to empower fellow researchers and security experts including the general public with an in-depth personal account overview of my experience in the security industry's as a teenage hacker

enthusiast back in the 90's today's most popular and often cited security blogger threat intelligence analyst and cybercrime researcher internationally and to present a diverse set of high-quality and never-published and discussed before case studies and enriched technical information and OSINT data on current and emerging cyber attack trends. The primary goal of the book would be to position my memoir as one of the most popular and often cited personal account of the hacking and the security Scene circa the 90's through the prism of my teenage hacker experience up to present day in terms of various high-profile and advanced nation-state actors and malicious and fraudulent cyber attack campaigns where the ultimate goal would be to discuss in-depth my experience in the field of security blogging threat intelligence gathering and cybercrime research throughout the past decade. It used to be a moment in time when "sharing was caring" and with the booming Web 2.0 enterprises and the actual concept numerous new online participants and Web 2.0. darlings started popping up as mushrooms another set of individuals prone to make a change an impact quickly emerged online potentially sharing a treasure trove of personal knowledge into the world of modern technologies including the very basics of information security hacking and cyber warfare including a newly releases and never-published before research into the area of cybercrime research and the actual process of profiling the bad guys online in terms of their actual campaigns and actual malicious infrastructure behind their online campaigns. It used to be a personal privilege back in December, 2005 when I originally launched my personal

Dancho Danchev's Blog - Mind Streams of Information Security Knowledge blog which quickly attracted a high-quality and relevant audience which is currently one of the security industry's most popular and relevant security hacking OSINT and threat intelligence including cybercrime research type of gathering online publications where I've continued to publish and post high-quality and never-published before and released research and analysis articles.

At some point in time I got practically used to getting referenced and quoted by mainstream

news media in terms of my research which greatly motivated an inspired me to continue doing

and visiting my blog on a daily basis where I owe everyone a big deal of thanks for the daily visits and for actually bothering to read my articles and actually go through my research at the time up to present day. Tracking down and monitoring the Koobface botnet on a daily basis where I successfully became the primary source of information on the Koobface botnet at the time was quite a success and a pretty interesting experience where I ultimately managed to take it offline including to held a Keynote presentation on the topic of monitoring and tracking down of the Koobface botnet

I originally started my primary area of occupation which is OSINT (Open Source Intelligence) back in December, 2005 when I originally launched my personal blog while stuyding in the Netherlands and working for - https://astalavista.com following and greatly inspired by the infamous “What use are they? They’ve got over 40,000 people over there reading newspapers.”

- President Nixon on the CIA in terms of utilizing public and open sources of information for doing research and actually be capable of gathering and working on with intelligence materials.

It used to be a moment in time when I originall witnessed the rise of one of the most powerful tools on the Internet which is Google in terms of research compared to a situation approximatelly over a decade ago when you had to use several different engines at the same time on your way to find valuable information. Today’s rise of Google in terms of modern and real-time search technology is an impressive tool in the arsenal of everyone doing research and aiming to gather information and intelligence for their project that also includes the use of the search engine for various OSINT related purposes. OSINT in the context of fighting cybercrime can be best described as the systematic and persistent use of public information for the purpose of building a cyber threat intelligence enriched data sets and intelligence databases both for real-time situational awareness and historical OSINT preservation purposes which also include to actually "connect the dots" in cybercrime gang and rogue cyber actor campaigns and cyber attack type of campaigns. A general example would consist of obtaining a single malicious software sample and using it on a public sandbox to further map the infrastructure of the cybercriminal behind it potentially exposing the big picture behind the campaign and connecting the dots behind their infrastructure which would lead to a multi-tude and variety of personally identifiable information getting exposed which could help build a proprietary cybercrime gang activity database and actually assist LE in tracking down the prosecuting the cybercriminals behind these campaigns. The primary idea here is to locate free and public online repositories of malicious software and to actually obtain a sample which will be later on used in a public sandbox for the purpose of mapping the Internet-connected infrastructure of the cybercrime gang in question including to actually elabore more on the ways they attempt to monetize the access to the compromised host including possibly ways in which they make money including to actually find out what exactly are they trying to compromise

Possible examples here include VirusTotal or actually running a malware interception honeypot such as for instance a spam trap which would allow you to intercept currently circulating in the wild malare campaigns that propagate using email and actually analyze them in terms of connecting the dots exposing their Internet-connected infrastructure and establishing the foundations for a successful career into the world of malicious software analysis and cybercrime research. The next logical step would be to properly assess and analyze the recently obtained sample and to properly establish the foundation of a "connect the dots" culture within your organization where the primary goal would be to have researchers and analysts look for clues on their way to track down and monitor a specific campaign potentially coming up with new and novel cyber attack attribution research. Visualization is often the key to everything in terms of visualizing threats and looking for additional clues and possible cyber attack attribution clues where a popular visualization and threat analysis tool known as Maltego should come into play which basically offers an advanced and sophisticated way to process OSINT and cybercrime research and threat intelligence type of information and actually enrich it using public and proprietary sources of information for the purpose of establishing the big picture and actually connecting the dots for a specific cyber attack campaign. Among the first things that you should consider before beginning your career in the World of OSINT is that everything that you need to know about a specific online event a specific online campaign that also includes the activities of the bad guys online is already out there in the form of publicly accessible information which should be only processed and enriched to the point where the big picture for a specific event or a malicious online campaign should be established using both qualitative and quantitative methodologies that also includes the process of obtaining access to the actual technical details and information behind a specific online event or an actual malicious and rogue online campaign. Among the few key things to keep in mind when doing OSINT including actual OSINT for cyber attack and cyber campaign attack attribution is the fact that in 99 % of the cases all the collection information that you need in terms of a specific case is already publicly known and is publicly accessible instead of having to obtain access to a private or a proprietary source of information and the only thing that you would have to do to obtain access to it is to use the World’s most popular search engine in terms of collection processing and enrichment

The second most popular thing to keep in mind when doing OSINT is that you don’t need to obtain access to proprietary even public OSINT tools.Following a series of messages left on the actual C &C (Command and Control) server locations which were basically greeting me and referencing my research at the time including a series of typosquatted domains using my name at some point in time I managed to actually come up with a proper "Top 10 Things You Didn’t Know About the Koobface Gang" article for ZDNet at the time wheret the botnet masters actually left a message within the C &C (Command and Control) server location basically answering the key points on a point by point basis which was quite a success at the time of monitoring and tracking down the Koobface botnet.

At a specific moment in time I got a personal invitation for a corporate project to work on using a full-time contract with Webroot Inc which was basically an extremely popular and easy to use and effective endpoint and corporate anti-virus solution where I had the privilege to work as a security blogger for a period of two years where I produced hundreds of high-profile and high-value research analysis on the topic of cybercrime research and malicious software analysis and research which ultimately led to me to visit InfoSec 2012 with my employer where

I held several presentations and actually responded to journalist inquiries about our current and ongoing research. Throughout my two years experience while working for Webroot is that I had the privilege to meet some professional folks with whom I had the privilege to work and collaborate including to actually get a pretty good commentary on my research including to actually attend RSA Europe 2012 including InfoSec 2012 on behal of my employer for the purpose of helding two presentations which were on the basics of Cyber Jihad vs Cyberterrorism including a general overview of trends within the cybercrime ecosystem where I got some pretty interesting questions from folks attending the presentation and actually got the chance and privilege to meet most of the U.S and U.K's team members. I've also managed to produce approximately 1224 pages of blog posts offering and providing actionable intelligence on some of the current and emerging cyber threats at the time which basically consisted of malware spam and phishing campaigns including a general overview of the cybercrime ecosystem in the context of offering additional insight into some of the currently active and in circulation tools of the trade within the cybercrime ecosystem at the time.

Dancho Danchev

This is Dancho (https://ddanchev.blogspot.com) and I've decided to share my personal real-life story circa the 90’s when I was a prominent ex-Bulgarian hacker during the infamous hacker spree during the 90’s when Astalavista.box.sk and Progenic.com were my primary and daily visit type of bookmarks which greatly provoked me to pursue a basically 20 year long career as an information security specialist today’s world’s leading expert in the field of cybercrime research and threat intelligence gathering that’s been maintaining one of the security industry’s leading and most popular security publications since December, 2005 which is my personal blog which I originally launched while working as a Managing Director for https://astalavista.com which at the time was one of the world’s most popular and high-traffic visited information security portals in the world where I had the privilege to work as a Managing Director while studying in the Netherlands.

Do you want to know about my real-life story as an ex-Bulgarian hacker during the 90’s? Are you interested in learning more about how we set up the foundation of the Technical Collection market segment including today’s modern threat intelligence market segment and how we set them straight using data information and knowledge which was produced and disseminated?

Keep reading.

The story takes place in a small town in Bulgaria during the 90’s in a post Soviet and post

Communist country where modern technologies slowly start to take place prompting a local whiz kid to gather as much information from a network of connected computers known as the Internet for the purpose of seeking a global domination through active and persistent information sharing exchange with colleagues from across the globe including exclusively the United States and members of the U.S Security Industry the Scene and prominent members of the

U.S Intelligence Community including hundreds of independent contractors in a post and pre

9/11 World which is where Dancho Danchev originally began his career as a hacker enthusiast today’s leading expert in the field of cybercrime research and threat intelligence gathering.

While I was in Bulgaria during my teenage hacker years I was busy freelancing as an information security consultant while working with international security portals where I was busy offering advice and practical information security advice and practical solution recommendations including my work with CIO.bg where I once contributed with an article on Cyberterrorism and Cyber Jihad including a series of publications for HiComm.bg where I was running a popular information security rubric and participated with several articles in several of the magazine’s issues.

At a later stage I somehow decided to go corporate an in a way find a way to enter the commercial information security industry with my knowledge potentially beginning to contribute with knowledge and information using my personal contacts at various information security portals on my way to land a possible job preferably as a writer security blogger or a journalist which I apparently succeeded in doing as I've been actively contributing with my own research and knowledge on a variety of h/c/p/a (Hacking/Cracking/Phreaking/Anarchy) portals at the time.

At some point in time Dancho decide to approach the primary operator of one of his favorite security Web sites at the time — https://net-security.org for the purpose of contributing with an article for their newly launched forbidden.net-security.org project. His idea was to contribute with a security article for their recently launched Newsletter and the article in question was a good old-fashined "How to use trojan horses" manual. The article eventually got accepted and Dancho felt proud of himself for making a contribution to the project and having his article published so that eventually more people will read it and send him an email with questions about trojan horses and the actual article. The primary Webmaster of net-security.org at the time was Berislav Kucan and the project still remains one of Dancho's favorite and most popular visited security Web site on a daily basis.

At a later stage I decided to establish a working relationship with Frame4 Security Systems which is a Dutch-based company for the purpose of writing an improved version of the original

“How to use trojan horses” paper which later on became the “The Complete Windows Trojans Paper” which quickly became one of the Scene’s most popular and highly read paper on modern trojan horses and how to use them and how to protect against them.

With the summer coming to an end Dancho got an offer to begin to work at the local office of his

ISP (Internet Service Provider) which at the time was Digital Systems for the position of office assistant where he was responsible for introducing new clients to the ISP’s service offering and for processing invoices. Among the key benefits for working at the local ISP office was the actual bandwidth that he got access to allowing him to access the Internet without any sort of limitations which he used to visit some of his favorite Top50 and Top100 security and hacking

Web sites where he eventually downloaded some of the most recently released hacking and security tools including trojan horses which he copied on a floppy disk and eventually brought back home during the lunch break for the purpose of exchanging the information with his second employer at the time which was an anti-trojans vendor using a publicly accessible FTP server for the purpose of helping his employer improve the detection rate for these type of programs and trojan horses. Dancho would then receive a payment for having collected and actually shared these programs and trojan horses which he would use to pay the bills at the time and actually pay for using his ISP’s service.

At some point in time he eventually got approached by a guy known as HeLLfiReZ who was interested in working with him and actually sharing his collection of trojan horses which he would then also share with his employer which at the time was LockDownCorp and earn revenue in the process. It would later come to his attentio that the guy that approached him was actually one of the key members of the infamous Sub7 trojan horse group which at a particual point in time was responsible for launching a DDoS (Distributed Denial of Service) attack against the researcher Steve Gibson who extensively profiled the campaign and actually had a conversation with HeLLfiReZ and his team members for the purpose of finding out how launched the attack and how it took place.

He would eventually run a personal hacking and secutity Web site archive using hosting courtesy of his employer LockDownCorp and run a popular Hacking and Security Web site which he would then feature on Progenic.com’s Top100 Hacking and Security Web sites including to actually offer paid security consultations in terms of finding out ways to help people protect their home PCs from trojan horses and teaching them how to use a firewall and how they can secure their home PCs.

At a later stage in his early Information Security career he would visit and join https://itsecurity.com’s Security Clinic where he would have his personal biography featured and actually respond to common security questions which users of the Web site will submit and have his response featured on the front page potentially driving traffic to his employer at the time which was Frame4 Security Systems and actually improving his knowledge and understanding of Information Security in general.

Dancho was also known for having participated in the Blackcode Ravers hacking group which was running the popular https://blackcode.com Web site at the time and actually participated with two issues of a popular Security Newsletter at the time which were featured on the home

During the glorious years of IRC (Internet Relay Chat) where Dancho was busy hanging on several IRC networks including DALNet and his local country’s IRC network he managed to obtain the /etc/shadow password file for his entire ISP (Internet Service Provider) which at the tim was Digital Systems and shared a copy of it with his best friend at the time George Kadiyski for the purpose of using several popular and high-profile Wordlists including John the Ripper password cracker potentially obtaining access and brute-forcing the entire password list for hundreds of active dial-up Internet based accounts at the time. Over a period of several days the results at the time were outstanding in the context of actually succeeding in the brute-forcing process potentially allowing Dancho and his friend to easily access free Internet based dial-up accounts which at the time cost money allowing them to use the Internet for free.

At a later stage Dancho also managed to obtain access to his local town's competing ISP (Internet Service Provider) which was known as BIANet /etc/shadow which was send to him by a friend and he also once again shared it with his friend who would once again begin brute-forcing the password file using a variety of Worldlists and the infamous John the Ripper passwor cracking tool at the time potentially allowing Dancho and his friend easy access to unlimited Internet based dial-up connectivity.

The time has come to play a game. Dancho quickly powered his 16-bit Pravetz PC 2MB RAM and a screen full of computer game choices quickly appeared prompting him to choose a game.

While loading a relatively known game known as Scorch Dancho decided to play two hours and then proceed with meeting his friends and start a discussion with his grandma. A huge fan of strategy games Dancho decided that he didn't have the time to dedicate to play his favorite game — Sid Meier's Civilization and instead he figured that he would eventually play the game later throughout the day. Playing Scorch was quite an experience and he took a few hours of his precious learning time to interact with the game. He then decided to approach his best friend at the time and co-conspirator in the World of UFO's the Soviet Union and computer games including the hacking Scene for two hours of extensive game play where we would strategize on how to best "approach" the Soviet Union in terms of invasion actively and carefully planning every move on our way to invade the Soviet Union and eventually all the surrounding countries. While I was busy preparing for our several hour game play George was supposed to be busy going through a CD which was basically a mirror of Packetstormsecurity in particular the E-Zine section so that we can prepare to have a conversation in terms of working out our technological and military strategy on our way to achieve global domination in the original Sid Meier's Civilization. What we basically did in the beginning was to strategize and actually get a better view of the technology tree of the game and while I was busy moving the Empire along

George was busy keeping notes on our way to keep track and advance out military strategy on a "first come first serve" basis.

Provoked by the need to reach out to a vast network of computers known as the Internet — Dancho quickly decided that the time has come to get connected — so that he decided to seek a proper connection provider in his local home-town. Back in the day the primary connection providers in the time were Bulgaria's Digital Systems BIA Net and the country's leading mobile connectivity provider — Mtel's pre-paid dial-up cards. Times were different in terms of connectivity and DSL and ADSL were a dream come true in the face of corporate networks properly utilizing and using ISDN type of based connectivity. Keeping it simple —

Dancho decided to quickly acquire the necessary dial-up modem — which he would eventually fall in love with potentially reaching out to a vast network of computers known as the Internet using the help of a local dial-up provider known as Digital Systems. Back in the day — hourly based dial-up access meant think twice about what you do and how you do it online which means that I would have to basically prepare a plan for the things that I'll do online including

Web sites which I would have to visit including a set of emails which I would have to send to a set of people including friends and colleagues.

It's been years since he prepared to acquire a personal computer and get connected meaning that he managed to prepare a list of Web sites and newsgroups on the topic of hacking and computer security including general Web sites that he would eventually visit. Among the first Web sites that he visited was NBA.com where he would quickly learn about the latest developments on his favorite team including daily going through photos and possibly video material to showcase his favorite team at the time. Among the most venerable experienced he first discovered prior to getting connected is to search for UFO photos and information on the KGB including the active reproduction of sound using his external speakers in a MIDI-dominated World at the time. The most venerable and unforgettable experience at the time was the fact that he had access to an email which he used to keep in touch with the Internet Service Provider's system administrator so that he could keep in touch with him including the active sharing of new Web site links for him to visit and exchange communication.

Among the next most prominent and key features of the Internet which I used at the time was ICQ in particular the fact that the messages from my hometown traveled to the capital of the country in real-time which was particularly impressive in particular the fact that I was receiving immediate responses to my messages. It was fairly logical to conclude that the active exchange of messages on ICQ and actual contacts was crucial to becoming popular and actually attempting to own the Scene. What I practically did at the time was to request several of my friends which were known to have been involved in the Scene at the time to forward and exchange a decent set of ICQ contacts of fellow members of the Scene which quickly empowered me with the necessary contacts to join several hacking groups in particular

HackHouse and the Social Engineering Project where I was proud to be a member of.

Among the first groups which I really joined at the time was Toxic Crisco which basically represented a group of individuals involved in a variety of online activities including possibly hacking including the SCR Project which was basically a social engineering driven hacking group where I was proud to be a member of in particular my active involvement in reading various high-profile psychology books at the time.

For the purpose of using IRC in particular DALnet Dancho quickly gathered a copy of the popular

mIRC including several War Scripts ICQ Bombers Nukers and Mail Bombers including trojan horses and quickly decided that he should start getting experienced in the world of hacking

for the purpose of gaining knowledge and impressing his friends. Among the first channels that he actually joined at the time were #gay and #lesbian where he was basically portraying himself as another person who was basically seeking to offer a new and novel photos-based

screensaver to a variety of individuals for the purpose of tricking them into executing the screensaver on their home PCs ultimately gaining access to their PCs using a popular trojan horse client at the time such as for instance Sub7.

It would be fairly easy to assume how things got complicated with Dancho quickly obtaining

access to Internet Relay Chat’s primary mIRC application including a variety of IRC-based “War Scripts” including a dozen of mail-bombers and various other ICQ-based type of Nukers and Flooders on his way to demonstrate a proper technical know-how to his friends and peers in the shady world of hacking. Among the first channels he tried to access were #hacker #hackers #hacking and the infamous #hackphreak on EFNet including to actually open several personal channels on the local IRC networks including #drugs #KGB and #linuxsecurity. At a later stage he actually managed to ask a friend for a possible operator status on the local town’s IRC channel where he was basically running a 24/7 online protection bot known as xploit including the active use of a Socks5 server which at the time was offered by his employer LockDownCorp where he was busy acting as Technical Collector of trojan horses/worms/viruses and VBS scripts for the purpose of improving the anti-trojan software’s signatures-based detection rates.

Among the first thing that Dancho decided to do in his spare time is to actively research the

a social engineering attack against his local town’s official Web site which basically succeed and resulted in a “greeting” message being posted on the official Web site with no actual data destruction and data removal taking place in what would appear to be a professional approach

when compromising a legitimate Web site for the purpose of greeting his personal friends and

would later on mature into a successful Technical Collection operation which basically paid his bills and actually offered him a decent financial incentive to continue getting involved in security as a hacker enthusiast and actually improved his employer's overall detection rate for some of the most prolific trojan horses at the time.

The actual contractual agreement had to do with Danchousing a private FTP server where he would spend hours uploading collected trojan horses using his home-based dial-up connection and eventually earning a revenue in the process using Western Union where he was happy to have established direct working relationship with one of the world's leading anti-trojans vendors which at the time was located at — http://proxy2.stealthedip.com/maniac/incoming/whether they are online using a popular trojan horse including to actually check his email account for their recently changed passwords and other related information including their current IP so that he can properly connect to their home PC for educational purposes.

Being the World's most notable cybercrime researcher security blogger and threat intelligence analyst the researcher quickly gained fame by systematically and efficiently profiling and analyzing a decent snapshot of malicious nation-state and fraudulent activity online leading him to pursue a successful career as the World's most popular cybercrime researcher security blogger

and threat intelligence analyst.

primary botnet that’s he’s been monitoring the infamous Koobface botnet using passive and active virtual SIGINT methodologies which basically include active sampling of the botnet’s malicious online activities using a daily set of intercepted malicious and fraudulent campaigns

launched managed and operated by the Koobface botnet for the purpose of providing the necessary technical operational and strategic OSINT type of intelligence including the daily batch of money mule recruitment domains and campaigns which he was busy profiling with the idea to assist U.S Law Enforcement on its way to track down and prosecute the cybercriminals behind these campaigns.

The Koobface botnet was the primary botnet propagating over social media at the time in particular Facebook and has already managed to affect tens of thousands of users globally potentially enticing them to interact with rogue and visual social engineering based type of

videos where the ultimate goal would be to attempt to affect their friends on Facebook by sending automated and legitimately looking messages including links to rogue and malicious content.

On a beautiful Thursday afternoon Dancho decided to play a decent computer game while his mother was busy ironing in the kid’s room and decided to take a journey successfully getting the World rid of hostile aliens. The game called Duke Nukem basically took Dancho on a journey to another World where he spend most of his afternoon getting rid of evil aliens while he led a discussion with his mother on his whereabouts during the day including active next-day class preparation and the eventual dinner conversation. While mom was busy ironing Dancho took on another journey to a distant World where he took care of and protected the Earth from evil aliens and decided that the time has come for a rest.

Some of the most memorable memories of Dancho back in the time have to do with playing full-time one of the best strategy games during the 90’s that’s Sid Meier’s Civilization. Spending a decent portion of his time basically four hours on a daily basis Dancho quickly acquired the necessary skills to take his civilization to a new level by waging wars developing and exchanging new technologies and by waging wars with competing and adversary civilizations.

Having already mastered the power of the Civilization game Dancho quickly fell into a World of politics technologies and wars and successfully mapped and left a foothold in the World the way he knew and mastered having successfully spend a decent portion of his time playing the best strategy game during the 90’s that’s Sid Meier’s Civilization. Game World is something different. Whenever Dancho decided to play a game the World came to a halt with Dancho playing and learning the basics and inner workings of every game that he managed to get his hands on throughout the 90’s.

Pushing the boundaries of the game at some point Dancho decided to take a deeper look at how you can actually make the computer’s player become more advanced and sophisticated and actually tried to train the AI of the game and potentially figured out a way to teach to use advanced warfare tactics.

analyst the researcher quickly gained fame by systematically and efficiently profiling and analyzing a decent snapshot of malicious nation-state and fraudulent activity online leading him to pursue a successful career as the World’s most popular cybercrime researcher security blogger and threat intelligence analyst.

Back in 2007 I got a direct invitation to attend a private and invite-only conference event held by the Honeynet Project at the U.K’s GCHQ which I actually attended and presented on a variety of topics including current and emerging cybercrime trends and actually got the opportunity to meet with the folks from the Honeynet Project.

In 2008 I got a surprise invitation to join the team at ZDNet a web site portal which I greatly admired while I was busy working for https://astalavista.com and I was in fact visiting on a daily basis where I spend a highly professional and productive 4 years as a security blogger at ZDNet’s Zero Day blog leading to me to thousands of publications including an actual award-winning Jessy H. Neal Award for working on ZDNet’s Zero Day blog.

Working for ZDNet greatly shaped my professional well-being in a way that I was basically working with top-notch technology experts from across the globe and actually had the chance to contribute with personal content and research for a period of four years which was an unforgettable experience and it’s still a pleasure and a honor to touch base and actually find a way to contribute and say hi to the people that I used to work with back in 2008.

At some point in time I eventually got invited to attend a private and invite-only conference where I presented on money mule recruitment practices and eventually got the privilege to meet most of the people that I work with on a face-to-face basis where we hang out and actually socialized and discussed various hot topics and cybercrime trends internationally.

Dancho began his career in the world of Intelligence Studies greatly provoked by research published and distributed by a U.S based company known as iDefense which basically specializes in profiling online hacktivism activity and is basically capable of producing high-quality and never-published before threat intelligence and general intelligence briefs. Among the key reports that Dancho was able to get his hands on was the U.S/China skirmish which basically consisted of various U.S and Chinese based groups actively interacting online by launching DDoS (Distributed Denial of Service) attacks against their infrastructure and participating in

Web site defacement campaigns. He would then research and actively visit the CIA.gov's official Web site including FAS.org and NSA.gov seeking manuals and research material on Open

Source Intelligence (OSINT) which would later on greatly contribute to help him become one of the World's leading experts in the field of cybercrime research and threat intelligence gathering.

In an early Monday morning the researcher quickly gathered a set of research materials of the primary botnet that's he's been monitoring the infamous Koobface botnet. His main motivation behind tracking down and monitoring one of the most prolific botnet that was spreading across Facebook at the time was to assist the Security Industry and researchers internationally including U.S law enforcement on their way to keep track of the botnet's activities and eventually attempt to take it offline and actually attempt to track down some of the authors behind it.

Dancho's daily routine consisted of checking the most recent campaigns launched by the gang and actually offer in-depth technical analysis on the latest campaigns publicly disseminating and profiling the campaigns at his personal blog leading him to a specific set of detailed and in-depth analysis of the Koobface botnet one of the few publicly accessible analysis resources on the topic at the time.

The botnet masters at the time were basically known to keep track of Dancho's research and eventually left a message embedded in the actual C &C infrastructure basically greeting the researcher for his research including a second and a third message during the Christmas season including an actual point-by-point response to his "Top 10 Things You Didn't Know About the Koobface Gang” article which he published at ZDNet’s Zero Day blog.

At a later stage he would present his findings in a Keynote Presentation at CyberCamp 2016 on the topic of “Exposing Koobface — The World’s Largest Botnet” in front of a high-quality audience and actually discuss in-depth how he tracked it down and eventually attempted to take it offline.

While he was busy studying in the Netherlands he became familiar what appeared to be one of the most popular Web sites for hackers on the Web known as Astalavista.com where he managed to actually find the real company behind the portal and actually approached.

In 2021 I can be reached at ddanchev@cryptogroup.net including my personal blog — https://ddanchev.blogspot.com including the infamous — https://astalavista.box.sk where I’m currently running a high-profile hacking and security project.

The primary purpose behind the actual release of my personal memoir is to reach out to to a

in combination with active case studies and technical material whose purpose is to greatly assist everyone that’s reading this memoir with the idea to provoke you to share it with your friends and colleagues including t

Following a successful career as a hacker enthusiast during the 90’s and a successful management and operation of one of the World’s leading portals for hackers and security experts which is https://astalavista.com for a period of three years circa 2003-2006 when I originally decided to launch one of the security industry’s leading publication which is my personal blog - https://ddanchev.blogspot.com I managed to somehow land a successful career as an independent contractor in the world of security blogging cybercrime research and threat intelligence which led me to visit several invite-only conferences including to present at event at an undisclosed location including to actually attract and retain approximatelly 6M page views which is not necessarily bad for a man one operation in terms of running and maintaining my personal blog for a period of 12 years.

Among the primary reasons for coming up with this 111 pages long personal memoir is to empower fellow researchers and security experts including the general public with an in-depth personal account overview of my experience in the security industry’s as a teenage hacker enthusiast back in the 90’s today’s most popular and often cited security blogger threat intelligence analyst and cybercrime researcher internationally and to present a diverse set of high-quality and never-published and discussed before case studies and enriched technical information and OSINT data on current and emerging cyber attack trends. The primary goal of the book would be to position my memoir as one of the most popular and often cited personal account of the hacking and the security Scene circa the 90’s through the prism of my teenage hacker experience up to present day in terms of various high-profile and advanced nation-state actors and malicious and fraudulent cyber attack campaigns where the ultimate goal would be to discuss in-depth my experience in the field of security blogging threat intelligence gathering and cybercrime research throughout the past decade. It used to be a moment in time when “sharing was caring” and with the booming Web 2.0 enterprises and the actual concept numerous new online participants and Web 2.0 darlings started popping up as mushrooms another set of individuals prone to make a change an impact quickly emerged online potentially sharing a treasure trove of personal knowledge into the world of modern technologies including the very basics of information security hacking and cyber warfare including a newly releases and never-published before research into the area of cybercrime research and the actual process of profiling the bad guys onlines in terms of their actual campaigns and actual malicious infrastructure behind their online campaigns. It used to be a personal privilege back in December, 2005 when I originally launched my personal Dancho Danchev's Blog - Mind Streams of Information Security Knowledge blog which quickly attracted a high-quality and relevant audience which is currently one of the security industry's most popular and relevant security hacking OSINT and threat intelligence including cybercrime research type of gathering online publications where I've continued to publish and post high-quality and never-published before and released research and analysis articles. At some point in time I got practically used to getting referenced and quoted by mainstream news media in terms of my research which greatly motivated an inspired me to continue doing my research an to actually attempt to inspire other researchers and readers to continue reading and visiting my blog on a daily basis where I owe everyone a big deal of thanks for the daily visits and for actually bothering to read my articles and actually go through my research at the time up to present day. Tracking down and monitoring the Koobface botnet on a daily basis where I successfully became the primary source of information on the Koobface botnet at the time was quite a success and a pretty interesting experience where I ultimately managed to take it offline including to held a Keynote presentation on the topic of monitoring and tracking down of the Koobface botnet

which were basically greeting me and referencing my research at the time including a series of typosquatted domains using my name at some point in time I managed to actually come up with a proper "Top 10 Things You Didn’t Know About the Koobface Gang" article for ZDNet at the time where the botnet masters actually left a message within the C &C (Command and Control) server location basically answering the key points on a point by point basis which was quite a success at the time of monitoring and tracking down the Koobface botnet. The primary purpose behind the actual release of my personal memoir is to reach out to to a new set of audience and actually elaborate more on my experience and expertise in the field including to offer a

God’s Eye perspective on the current and emerging cybercrime ecosystem in combination with active case studies and technical material whose purpose is to greatly assist everyone that’s reading this memoir with the idea to provoke you to share it with your friends and colleagues including to actually recommend it to your friends and colleagues.

Back in the day my primary area of occupation was to monitor and track down the Koobface botnet where I was basically acting as the primary source of real-time and actionable intelligence on the whereabouts of the Koobface botnet including to actually profile and analyze some of their latest campaigns which led to a variery of pretting interesting situations where they’ve actually redirected Facebook’s entire IP space to my personal blog including to actually leave several greeting within the botnet’s C &C channel in terms of sending me a message and greeting me including a step by step response to my "Top 10 Things You Didn’t Know About the Koobface Gang" article where they actually responded to my ZDNet article at the time in a step by step fashion. At a specific point in time I was originally invited to held the Keynote presentation at the CyberCamp 2016 security conference where I presented on the topic of tracking down and monitoring the Koobface one of the world’s largest botnets which was a tremendous success in the context of communicating most of my research to a wider audience.

Back in 2011 while I was busy living in another town I actually met with a NYTime reporter for the purpose of catching up and elaborating more on my research on the Koobface botnet which was quite a success in terms of communicating my findings to a proper party which eventually led to a high-profile quote on my research on the Koobface botnet in the original

NYTimes.com At a specific point in time my primary area of occupation included the active monitoring and taking down of the Koobface botnet which at the time was the only active social media propagating botnet that was successfully targeting Facebook in terms of spreading malicious software across the social media platform sucessfully affecting its users. The gang then continued its underground marketplace activities by starting to serve client-side exploits to users visiting major Koobface Web properties that also includes fake YouTube including Flash Player serving Web sites part of the Koobface botnet.

During the 90’s I had the privilege to own a personal computer among the few kids on the block that really had a personal PC at their place which at the time was an IBM clone known as Pravetz 16 which basically allowed me to explore the world of computers and technology while working with various files and actually spending most of my time playing computer games. I started getting involved in the world of hacking largely provoked by several movies such as for instance the original "Hackers" movie including the buzz around the very idea of compromising and penetrating another person or organization’s PC seeking intellectual exploration as a basic motivation factor. Among my primary bookmarks at the time were htps://textfiles.com including Box.sk and https://astalavista.box.sk including Progenic.com and naturally packetstormsecurity where I was busy going through the news on a daily basis potentially getting myself motivated by some of the latest web site defacements of high-profile Web sites around the globe.

Among my first contributions in the field were several text files including the production of two issues of Trojan Defense Suite's Newsletter and the production of the security newsletter for Blackcode.com including several papers detailing the basics of trojan horses and how to use them including how to protect yourself against them including several text files in various categories including papers on anarchy. What I was particularly famous at the time with is the production of "The Complete Windows Trojans Paper" which at the time was the only and most popular text file explaining the basics of trojan horses and to protect yourself against them.

Something else I was particularly popular with was my personal online hacking and security files repositiory which was actually featured on several top lists for hacking and security web sites including Progenic.com where I was getting a lot of traffic and there were actually quite a lot of people voting for my personal web site and supporting it. I was also specifically well known for producing several issues of the security newsletter for Blackcode.com which was a top and high-profile high-traffic visited portal for hacking resources back in the 90's where I had the privilege to produce the portal's security newsletter and contribute with actual articles on the topic.

realized, that, several, students, need, to, tell, their, lesson, and, started, asking, who’s, decided, to, tell, their, lesson, first. Sten, quickly, decided, to, share, a, feeling, of, comfortability, with, his, next, desk, neighbor, and, quickly, smiled, thinking, about, all, the, things, he’ll, do, when, he, gets, back, home. A, perfect, surrounding, and, a, room, full, of, personal, belongings, quickly, drove, Sten, to, realize, the, vast, potential, of, his, personal, mindset, allowing, him, to, consider, the, possibility, of, all, the, things, he’ll, do, when, he, gets, back, home.

His students, quickly, realized, that, the, time, to, tell, their, lesson, has, come, and, prepared, to, get, asked, by, their, teacher, about, everything, they, learned, about, their, lesson. First, things, come, first, with, several, of, his, classmates, getting, asked, about, their, teacher, and, what, they, learned, about, their, lesson.

Sten, quickly, payed, attention, to, his, classmate, getting, asked, about, his, lesson, and, quickly, felt, the, comfortability, of, knowing, that, he, knew, his, lesson. Time, for, a, break, and, the, classmates, quickly, went, on, to, decide, on, how, to, change, rooms. While, the, room, was, changed, Sten, quickly, wandered, around, thinking, and, considering, the, possibility, of, owning, a personal computer, including, the, joys, and, benefits, of, sharing, his, belongings, with, someone, else. Next, lesson, comes, next, the, classmates, quickly, entered, a, new, room, and, started, getting, prepared, for, their, class.

The rush, through, the, hallway, quickly, embraced, Sten, and, his, friend, and, they, quickly, wandered, around, seeking, and, feeling, blissful, joys, of, shared, compatibility, with, the, surrounding, environment. Next, lesson, comes, next, and, the, friends, quickly, entered, a, new, room, quickly, busy, preparing, for, their, lesson. Unpacking, was, easy, a textboook, a, notebook, a pencil, and, various, related, materials, getting, ready, for, their, lesson. Sten, was, busy, considering, the, joys, of, owning, a personal, computer, and, quickly, decided, that, thinking, about, it, made, him, feel, even, better. Considering, the, joys, of, owing, a, personal, computer, was, quite, an, experience, and, Sten, felt, even, better, while, considering, the, joys, and, a, feeling, of, belonging, to, a, personal, need, and, self-preservation, type, of, self-being, joyful, experience, allowing, him, to, further, expand, his, emotional, feeling, of, belonging, to, a, surrounding, environment, including, his, friend.

With, lessons, about, to, get, over, Sten, and his, friend, decided, that, time, for, home, was, even, better, and, they, quickly, wandered, around, figuring, a way, to, find, the, hallway, as, they, decided, to, go, back, home. The trip, was, quite, a, pleasant, surprise, with, both, of, them, walking, the, same, path, as, they, walk, on, an occasional, basis, as, they, decided, that, time, for, home, was, even, better. Entering, the, hallway, was, quite, an, experience, and, both, of, them, feeling, a feeling, of, belonging, quickly, entered, the hallway, and, decided, that, time, for, home, was, even, better.

Quickly, packing, the, bags, was, easy, as, a lot, of, friends, decided, that, time, for, home, was, even, better, as, they, decided, that, time, for, home, was, even, better. Quickly, decided, that, time, for, home, was, even, better, Sten, and his, friend, quickly, packed, their, bags, and, went, on, to, see, their, friends, as, they, decided, that, time, for, home, was, even, better.

Slowly entering the premises of what can be best described as home, grandma was quick to prepare lunch a cozy feeling of home-belonging and a warm fireplace feeling of personal self-belonging. While paying attention to what Sten managed to achieve during the day, grandma payed attention to his lesson by a personal feeling of belonging to what Sten would do next during the afternoon. Sitting and watching right behind him, grandma took the time and effort to pay attention to his lesson and a personal feeling of self-belonging quickly started to take place prompting Sten to learn his lesson even faster. The TV quickly ran a story following a placement of an animated cartoon aired on Ostankino a Russian national-TV back in the time called “Maya” the Bee.

The time has come to play a game. Sten quickly powered his 16-bit Pravetz PC 2MB RAM and a screen full of computer game choices quickly appeared prompting him to choose a game.

While loading a relatively known game known as Scorch Sten decided to play two hours and then proceed with meeting his friends and start a discussion with his grandma. A huge fan of strategy games Sten decided that he didn’t have the time to dedicate to play his favorite game

- Sid Meier’s Civilization and instead he figured that he would eventually play the game later throughout the day. Playing Scorch was quite an experience and he took a few hours of his precious learning time to interact with the game. He then decided to approach his best friend at the time and co-conspirator in the World of UFO’s the Soviet Union and computer games including the hacking Scene - George Kadiysky for two hours of extensive game play where we would strategize on how to best “approach” the Soviet Union in terms of invasion actively and carefully planning every move on our way to invade the Soviet Union and eventually all the surrounding countries. While I was busy preparing for our several hour game play

George was supposed to be busy going through a CD which was basically a mirror of Packetstormsecurity in particular the E-Zine section so that we can prepare to have a conversation in terms of working out our technological and military strategy on our way to achieve global domination in the original Sid Meier’s Civilization. What we basically did in the beginning was to strategize and actually get a better view of the technology tree of the game and while I was busy moving the Empire along George was busy keeping notes on our way to keep track and advance out military strategy on a “first come first serve” basis.

Getting Connected

Provoked by the need to reach out to a vast network of computers known as the Internet - Sten quickly decided that the time has come to get connected - so that he decided to seek a proper connection provider in his local home-town. Back in the day the primary connection providers in the time were Bulgaria’s Digital Systems BIA Net and the country’s leading mobile connectivity provider - Mtel’s pre-paid dial-up cards. Times were different in terms of connectivity and DSL and ADSL were a dream come true in the face of corporate networks properly utilizing and using ISDN type of based connectivity. Keeping it simple - Sten decided to quickly acquire the necessary dial-up modem - which he would eventually fall in love with potentially reaching out to a vast network of computers known as the Internet using the help of a local dial-up provider known as Digital Systems. Back in the day - hourly based dial-up access meant think twice about what you do and how you do it online which means that I would have to basically prepare a plan for the things that I'll do online including Web sites which I would have to visit including a set of emails which I would have to send to a set of people including friends and colleagues.

It's been years since he prepared to acquire a personal computer and get connected meaning that he managed to prepare a list of Web sites and newsgroups on the topic of hacking and computer security including general Web sites that he would eventually visit. Among the first Web sites that he visited was NBA.com where he would quickly learn about the latest developments on his favorite team including daily going through photos and possibly video material to showcase his favorite team at the time. Among the most venerable experienced he first discovered prior to getting connected is to search for UFO photos and information on the KGB including the active reproduction of sound using his external speakers in a MIDI-dominated World at the time. The most venerable and unforgettable experience at the time was the fact that he had access to an email which he used to keep in touch with the Internet Service Provider's system administrator Bogdan Dochev so that he could keep in touch with him including the active sharing of new Web site links for him to visit and exchange communication.

Among the next most prominent and key features of the Internet which I used at the time

was ICQ in particular the fact that the messages from my hometown traveled to the capital

receiving immediate responses to my messages. It was fairly logical to conclude that the

and actually attempting to own the Scene. What I practically did at the time was to request several of my friends which were known to have been involved in the Scene at the time to

quickly empowered me with the necessary contacts to join several hacking groups in particular

HackHouse and the Social Engineering Project where I was proud to be a member of.

Among the first groups which I really joined at the time was Toxic Crisco which basically represented a group of individuals involved in a variety of online activities including possibly hacking including the SCR Project which was basically a social engineering driven hacking group where I was proud to be a member of in particular my active involvement in reading various high-profile

psychology books at the time.

For the purpose of using IRC in particular DALnet Stan quickly gathered a copy of the popular

mIRC including several War Scripts ICQ Bombers Nukers and Mail Bombers including tro-jan

for the purpose of gaining knowledge and impressing his friends. Among the first channels

that he actually joined at the time were #gay and #lesbian where he was basically portraying

himself as another person who was basically seeking to offer a new and novel photos-based

screensaver to a variety of individuals for the purpose of tricking them into executing the screensaver on their home PCs ultimately gaining access to their PCs using a popular trojan horse client at the time such as for instance Sub7.

On a beautiful Thursday afternoon Stan decided to play a decent computer game while his mother was busy ironing in the kid's room and decided to take a journey successfully getting the World rid of hostile aliens. The game called Duke Nukem basically took Stan on a journey to another World where he spend most of his afternoon getting rid of evil aliens while he led a discussion with his mother on his whereabouts during the day including active next-day class preparation and the eventual dinner conversation. While mom was busy ironing Stan took on another journey to a distant World where he took care of and protected the Earth from evil aliens and decided that the time has come for a rest.

Some of the most memorable memories of Sten back in the time have to do with playing full-time one of the best strategy games during the 90’s that’s Sid Meier’s Civilization. Spending a decent portion of his time basically four hours on a daily basis Sten quickly acquired the necessary skills to take his civilization to a new level by waging wars developing and exchanging new technologies and by waging wars with competing and adversary civilizations.

Having already mastered the power of the Civilization game Sten quickly fell into a World of politics technologies and wars and successfully mapped and left a foothold in the World the way he knew and mastered having successfully spend a decent portion of his time playing the best strategy game during the 90’s that’s Sid Meier’s Civilization. Game World is something different. Whenever Sten decided to play a game the World came to a halt with Sten playing and learning the basics and inner workings of every game that he managed to get his hands on throughout the 90’s.

Pushing the boundaries of the game at some point Stan decided to take a deeper look at how you can actually make the com-puter’s player become more advanced and sophisticated and actually tried to train the AI of the game and potentially figured out a way to teach to use advanced warfare tactics.

The primary source of new games which were basically coming from Russian-distributed CDs at the time was Pavel Vitkov a close friend to Dancho who was actually possessing and was able to negotiate and obtain some of the latest and most popular games worth playing at the time. While Dancho was busy becoming a master of Sid Meier's Civilization most of his friends and colleagues at the time were busy playing another game part of the franchise known as Colonization which despite the fact that it was pretty similar to Sid Meier's Civilozation couldn't really offer the necessary global politics and war strategy tactics including possible espionage tactics which Dancho was looking for in a modern game at the time.

It would be fairly easy to assume how things got complicated with Sten quickly obtaining access to Internet Relay Chat's primary mIRC application including a variety of IRC-based "War Scripts" including a dozen of mail-bombers and various other ICQ-based type of Nukers and Flooders on his way to demonstrate a proper technical know-how to his friends and peers in the shady world of hacking. Among the first channels he tried to access were #hacker #hackers #hacking and the infamous #hackphreak on EFNet including to actually open several personal channels on the local IRC networks including #drugs #KGB and #linuxsecurity. At a later stage he actually managed to ask a friend for a possible operator status on the local town's IRC channel where he was basically running a 24/7 online protection bot known as xploit including the active use of a Socks5 server which at the time was offered by his employer LockDownCorp where he was busy acting as Technical Collector of trojan horses/worms/viruses and VBS scripts for the purpose of improving the anti-trojan software's signatures-based detection rates.

rent employers at the time which he used to increase his reputation on the local IRC Network and to actually hide his real IP

Among the first thing that Stan decided to do in his spare time is to actively research the local Webmaster of his hometown's official Web site for the purpose of attempting to launch

and resulted in a "greeting" message being posted on the official Web site with no actual data

destruc-tion and data removal taking place in what would appear to be a professional approach

of one of his closest friends and another fellow hacker enthusiast.

which at the time was LockDownCorp one of the world's leading anti-trojan vendors for the purpose of improving the detection rate for these publicly accessible trojan horses in what would later on mature into a successful Technical Collection operation which basically paid his bills and actually offered him a decent financial incentive to continue getting involved in security as a hacker enthusiast and actually improved his employer's overall detection rate for some of the most prolific trojan horses at the time.

The actual contractual agreement had to do with Stan using a private FTP server where he would spend hours uploading collected trojan horses using his home-based dial-up connection and eventually earning a revenue in the process using Western Union where he was happy to have established direct working relationship with one of the world's leading anti-trojans

vendors which at the time was located at - http://proxy2.stealthedip.com/maniac/incoming/

Whenever Stan would attempt to reach out to his friends he would attempt to find out whether they are online using a popular trojan horse including to actually check his email account for their recently changed passwords and other related information including their current IP so that he can properly connect to their home PC for educational purposes.

The primary purpose for connecting to a friend's PC using a popular trojan horse would be purely for educational purposes with no actual hard or any sort of eavesdropping taking place.

While Dancho was busy studying in the Netherlands he was busy persistently checking one of the World's most popular and high-trafficked Web sites for hackers and security experts

Astalavista.com - and sticking to the common wisdom circa the 90‘s where everyone was busy making contributions and launching new groups - he decided to approach the company behind the portal with a possible business proposal that basically consisted of having him monitor and actually maintain the portal in terms of content including the actual production of a high-profile

Security Newsletter where we would produce security and hacking articles including a featured

Security Interview with key members from the Scene and the Security Industry.

Sample Screenshot of the Astalavista.com Information Security Portal which Dancho Danchev was running as a Managing Director 2003-2006 where he was basically responsible for all the content

Prior to getting a confirmation from a Team Member of the actual owner of the portal at the time

Dancho quickly began entering into negotiations about a possibly paid including a free venture at the time where he could earn a small comission for producing a high-quality security newsletter and actually be responsible for all the security and hacking content at Astalav-ista.com on a monthly and daily basis.

during his student years in the Netherlands as a Managing Director at Astalavista.com

As he began working on the monthly newsletter the first issue including the remaining twenty six issues which he produced over a period of three years were quite a success including the actual Geeky Photos section where portal users could send in photos of their desktop computers for the purpose of featuring them at the Web site potentially promoting their desktop setups to our audience at the time eventually leading him and the portal to win a PCMagaine Top 100

Security Sites Award for 2005

Among Dancho’s main responsibilities at the time where the daily updating of the portal with high quality security documents tools and presentations including actual hacking and security links and overall responsibility for all the content at the Web site including the production of a highly popular security newsletter at the time including to actually answer and work on possible partnership and advertising inquiries at the time which led to a successful repositioning of the portal as one of the primary information security portal services online.

Among the key folks and individuals that he interviewed during his management of Astalavista.com and asked some pretty decent and relevant questions at the time include:

The World’s Largest Botnet”

Being the World’s most notable cybercrime researcher security blogger and threat intelligence analyst the researcher quickly gained fame by systematically and efficiently profiling and analyzing a decent snapshot of malicious nation-state and fraudulent activity online leading him to

and threat intelligence analyst.

primary botnet that’s he’s been monitoring the infamous Koobface botnet using passive and

active virtual SIGINT methodologies which basically include active sampling of the botnet's

batch of money mule recruitment domains and campaigns which he was busy profiling with the idea to assist U.S Law Enforcement on its way to track down and prosecute the cybercriminals

behind these campaigns.

The Koobface botnet was the primary botnet propagating over social media at the time in

potentially enticing them to interact with rogue and visual social engineer-ing based type of

sending automated and legitimately looking messages including links to rogue and malicious content.

What what particularly interesting about the Koobface botnet at the time was the easy to track down and monitor actual C &C and campaign infrastructure where I was busy tracking it down and publishing my findings on a daily basis for the purpose of empowering my blog readers and the security community with the necessary threat intelligence on the actual whereabouts of the Koobface botnet in terms of offering as much technical details as possible with the idea to profile and keep track of its campaigns potentially assisting Facebook at the time including fellow security researchers on their way to track down and monitor the campaign.

Back in 2008 I got the personal privilege to attend a high-profile conference event organized

NOTE:

I wrote this article back in 2007. Here’s the [2]achive. [3]Jefrey Pfeffer’s Business 2.0 columns always load me with self-esteem, and provoke me to go beyond the patters of success, the ones I’m aware of. Integrity is an important quality, and so it adaptability and the enlightment of constant self-development.

I tend to have developed this internal Early Warning System for tensions. What does this mean?

I use a cheap hushmail account, blogspot as a blogging platform, as I’m indeed trying to prove something - it’s not about the blogging platform, it’s not about being a domainer, it’s all about the knowledge. Respect to HD Moore for still sticking to his black background, exactly the same one I was using for several months.

The chase of an utopian dream - perfection is a never ending driving force, you know you can never be perfect, since it’s hard to define, but the constant idea of trying to achieve something unachievable might indeed lead you somewhere.

The ultimate question - what do others think about me? how would I be remembered when I’m gone? is where the problem starts. Being remembered means you’re already gone.

There are three different dimensions of the "I", the one you really are, the one you want to me, and the one the people perceive you as. You’d better focus more who you actually are so you can do better, and who you want to be, than ending up as being anything else but "someone else’s expectation", more or less a transparent hologram of other people wanted you to be.

What would others say? What if they don’t like it? What if it undermines my confidence in myself at the end of the day? Being hated, or having a "fan club" means you’re definitely up to something, all you need to break through is believing it.

Hanging out with the winners of the day is an every day reality, but the reality is that the true cyberpunks often hang outside at a party or con, far away from the populist speeches, and yet another 10k keynote mind-provoker. Still in need of a real-life story? Try Jessus, who was supposed to hang out with the posers, the ones that supposedly excelled in the society at the period of time, still he was dining with the opposite parties.

To me, it’s always a matter of perspective and a vision.

Reaching the "Trust no one" stage in your life means you’re definitely up to something, and most importantly had the courage to raise above, the consequences among the knives flying around, behind, and above you, are the opportunity costs you have sacrificed due to your behavior such as less time spent on chasing chicky chicks for instance.

People easily forget themselves in the euphoria of temporary success, and while even the fact of forgetting yourself means you used to be someone, this desperate cry for self-awareness in itself is a pitiful personal milestone.

Don’t fight for appraisal, but learn to praise yourself, be interested, not interesting, break out of definitions, and question everything, even yourself.

The Most Wanted Cyber Jihadist - An Analysis (2022-10-26 08:49)

NOTE:

I wrote this post in 2007.

This would have been an important blog post if [2]cyber jihad were to be a issue that can be personalized, however, the reality as always has to do with another perspective, which in cyber jihad's case is diversification, localization of knowledge, and a knowledge-driven cyber jihadist communities itself.

My point is that this guy should not be considered as the public face of cyber jihad, now that he's no longer active as a cyber jihadist, he's a cyber martyr that will be inspiring another generation of wannabe cyber jihadists to come.

[3]Here's the article:

" In addition, Tsouli Irhabi used countless other web sites as free hosts for material that the jihadists needed to upload and share. The true extent of his material distribution network is still not known. He is credited with the large scale distribution of a film produced by Zarqawi called "All Is for Allah's Religion. His arrest struck a significant blow to al Qaeda's cyber terrorism weaponry. With cyber weaponry only requiring widely available knowledge and skills and the only equipment required a computer that can be purchased anywhere, cyber weapons proliferation cannot be controlled. "

My favorite quote - " With cyber weaponry only requiring widely available knowledge and skills and the only equipment required a computer that can be purchased anywhere, cyber weapons

proliferation cannot be controlled. These facts coupled with the recent cyber attacks on utilities that blackout cities and regions show this is a serious threat. "

Wait a sec. PSYOPS is a practice by itself which in this case aims to increase the investments made into securing the critical infrastructure of a country, one that I bet even the bad guys stopped targeting due to the logical nature of the attack? It is such a practice. Moreover, remember another such PSYOPS practice, namely the desired "media-echo" effect achieved?

A Pragmatic Cyberwarfare Doctrine - What Money Cannot Buy - An Analysis

NOTE:

I wrote this post in 2007. These are basically some notes that I took on the emerging back then

[2]cyber warfare doctrine problem that the U.S was facing.

Key summary points:

- never let an insider do an outsider’s job

-the convergence of conventional military capabilities and asymmetric warfare

- bombing the source of the attack means, you'll have a U.S strategic bomber bombing a place somewhere in the U.S.

- subverting the enemy without fighting

- cyberwarfare attack from inside the fortification

- virtual cyber warfare competitions in a controlled environment

When you dedicate the largest proportion to keep up with the conventional military arms race, it's the superpower, or a third world country that would defeat your entire conventional military arsenal by not even confronting with it, and thus, by lacking the point of engagement render it useless in the sense of directly bypassing it.

Should a Country Physically Bomb the Source of the Cyber Attack? - An Analysis

NOTE:

I wrote this post in 2007.

It all started with the basic speculation that a superpower should aim to physically bomb the source of the cyber attack.

Here are some thoughts:

- physically bomb the source of the attack is not a metaphor, its an indication of the wrongly understood situational awareness

- install a hxxp://makelovenotspam.com type of screensaver on each and every U.S government

PC, have it periodically obtain the last list of hosts to be attacked, obtained from a central Target

List repository

- if the U.S is to attack those attacking the U.S, a third party interested in taking advantage of the U.S's bandwidth and know-how would easily make it look like someone else is attacking the U.S and have the U.S attack the third party enemies

- the myth of lining up your army, and waiting for the other army to appear at a particular battlefield doesn't exist in a cyber guerilla information warfare, where you're the visible target, and your enemy is everywhere.

- each and every of the comments regarding the stereotyped type of adversary talk like the adversary has a home address, physical headquarters

- there's no physical location to be bombed, there's no IP to be DDoS-ed since it's not theirs, there's no home PC of the commander to take control of.

The bottom line, some of the most insightful and visionary for decades to come cyber warfare research papers I've ever read, were written by U.S army researchers. However, as if pretty much everything else in life, those who don't know are usually the one holding up the positions where they're supposed to know more than everyone, and exactly the opposite.

The U.S is Facing a Cyber Warfare Doctrine Crisis - An Analysis (2022-10-26 09:02)

NOTE:

I wrote this blog post in 2007. Is it just me, or I get depressed when I come across the words

- U.S Cyber Command, Twiki.net and serial entrepreneur in the same article? Someone once said that in the long term mega corporations and governments will be mainly involved in Talent Wars, and he was right. After reading this article, I bet that Chinese cyber warriors will issue an email to their internal mailing list entitled "The Depressing State of the U.S's Cyber Warfare Doctrine" and someone will respond "What Cyber Warfare Doctrine?!". Cutting the sarcasm, this is either a sophisticated PSYOPS to on purposely let others underestimate the Cyber Command's upcoming decentralization point in history, or Human Resources department in the rush to meet a deadline.

Great stuff, so if every agency is doing whatever every agency feels like doing, you'll have several agencies collecting intelligence on the same individual/group of individuals, who will inevitably end up in a situation where they'll be collecting raw and unique to them only data, one that some of the other agencies would have already obtained and marked as outdated and irrelevant under the current circumstances.

Why the emphasis on decentralization, when it should be on distributed management as a concept?

How can you centralize your opponents when they've already reached the unrestricted warfare stage, and have long been envisioning the potential of people's information warfare?

I guess that is the core of decentralized management is that everyone is doing whatever he feels like doing.

Bureaucratic Warfare Against Unrestricted Warfare - An Analysis (2022-10-26 09:05)

[1]

NOTE:

I wrote this blog post in 2007. In a people's information warfare scenario, the masses of end users wanting to contribute bandwidth being recruited on a nationalism level, will simply infect themselves with malware courtesy of the technical crowd possessing the capabilities to come up with such a malware. In an arrogant people's information warfare, the technical crowd or the "bot source compilers generation" will not just distribute DoS attack tools and a targets list, they will backdoor the DoS tool itself, just like the case with this tool which I believe was distributed during the frontal hacktivism attack.

Moreover, it wasn't a cyberwar, as it any type of war you have both sided loosing or gaining tactical advantage, it was a virtual "shock and awe".

Ten Signs It’s a Slow News Week - An Analysis (2022-10-26 09:07)

I wrote this blog post in 2007.

- Articles starting that malware increased 450 % during the last quarter - of course it’s supposed to increase given the automated polymorphism they’ve achieved thereby having anti virus vendors spend more money on infrastructure to analyze it
- Articles starting that spam and malware attacks will increase and get more sophisticated
- Articles discussing a new malware spreading around instant messaging networks – psst they’re hundreds of them currently spreading

- Articles discussing how signature based malware scanning is next while an anti virus vendor's ad is rotating on the right side of the article

- Articles commenting on an exploit code for a high risk vulnerability made public – it's been usually circulating around VIP underground forums weeks before it made to the mainstream media, with script kiddies leaking it to other script kiddies

- Articles pointing out how phishers started targeting a specific company

- Article emphasizing on how mobile malware will take over the world, despite that there no known outbreaks currently active in the wild

- Articles pointing out that having a firewall and an updated anti virus software is important

- Articles discussing which OS is the most secure one

- Articles mentioning the percentage increase in the thousands of spam and phishing emails for the last quarter

Spotting Moguls - An Analysis (2022-10-26 09:12)

NOTE:

I wrote this blog post in 2007.

What's so bad in being a mogul?

- Moguls are boring

- Moguls are predictable

- Moguls are biased

- Moguls often use their company's over-valued financial performance – excluding the initial investment – as a speaking platform

- If Moguls blog, it would be on the Insecurities of Sun Tanning and everything in between

- Moguls conveniently "exclude the middle" taking credit for the Moon’s announcing phrases

- Moguls often whine when they should scream

- Moguls preach, rather than teach

- Moguls neatly restart the threat cycle of a particular threat in a mostly self-serving manner

- Moguls spend too much time not just looking into the mirror, but talking to its reflection

- Moguls are bad the way synthetic drugs are, and with the time you don’t have a choice buto start listing to "those voices" – rats have big ears.

- Moguls are a bad, yet amusing necessary evil, one that must be professionally dealt with.

- Even more amusing they become, as they start baby booming.

I've decided to share this post including related screenshots and technical details with the idea to inspire everyone to continue doing their research including cyber attack and campaign tracking and monitoring including cyber attack and cyber attack campaign attribution efforts.

Back in 2009 there was a major speculation that Russia indeed launched a massive DDoS (Distributed Denial of Service) attack against Georgia which was in fact true. What was particularly interesting about this campaign was the fact that the same DDoS for hire including the managed DDoS service that was behind the attack was also observed to launch related

DDoS attack campaigns against bobbear.co.uk including a multi-tude of Russian homosexual

Web sites where the actual Web sites indeed posted a message back then on their official Web sites signaling the existence of the DDoS attack targeting their Web sites.

Dear blog readers,

I’ve decided to share a compilation of botnets-in-the-wild screenshots coming straight from the source namely various cybercrime-friendly forums internationally with the idea to raise everyone’s situational awareness on the current state of the botnet ecosystem globally in the context of having hundreds of folks out there building and generating these potentially earning tens of thousands of fraudulent revenue in the process.

An image is worth a thousand words.

Sample screenshots of various botnets-in-the-wild obtained using public sources include:

Dear blog readers,

It's a public secret that the majority of today's modern Web sites rely on the use of CAPTCHA for proper user vs bot or automated software detection which in reality is a flawed and an outdated approach to protect a Web site and its visitors as in 2022 we continue to live in a world where

CAPTCHA-solving as a service that also includes reCAPTCHA solving as a service continues to proliferate with possible thousands of users across the globe processing hundreds of thousands of CAPTCHAs courtesy of popular CAPTCHA services for the purpose of empowering Russian or international cybercriminals on their way to properly and automatically register new accounts on major Web properties and social networks internationally.

In this post I'll detail the activities of several known CAPTCHA-solving services and discuss in-depth their functionalities with the idea to raise awareness on the concept including the systematic and automatic CAPTCHA solving courtesy of humans and their affiliate-based networks.

Mobile Malware - Hype or Threat? - An Analysis (2022-10-27 23:58)

Source: McAfee Labs, 2020.

NOTE:

I wrote this article in 2006.

You've definitely witnessed the ongoing speculations on whether or not mobile malware represents the type of threat some vendors got accused of hyping. Malware authors have this unique position to follow the trend, understand when an approach gets mature enough to think of how to reset it, and then all of a sudden completely shift their techniques – which results in P2P, IM, Email, and yes, Skype as the "next big thing" on the malware scene type of weekly media articles.

It’s all cyclical, and not a rocket science needing a reverse engineer to explain and dazzle you with advanced Assembly experience.

There are incentives for malware authors to code mobile malware, namely the commercialization of mobile malware itself, which happened in the middle of 2006 with the release of the RedBrowser. Among the key point I indicated in my "[2]Malware - Future Trends" research that I released in the beginning of 2006. The ugliest things are the easiest to emerge as always.

The very nature of a mobile phone’s voting and purchasing power, let’s not mention could literally provoke your imagination on the possible abuses.

Why would an end user start asking a mobile operator’s representative on the availability of mobile anti virus scanners? Because he or she would have been a victim the art of market development, viral

The industry’s main points:

- more people have mobile phones then they own a personal computer – which doesn’t mean they’re all smart phones running Symbian or Windows Mobile

- over 300 generically detected malware samples, reminds of the concept of a malware family in PC malware world. These are all the Cabir family, spread to code on the Internet and have ordes of script kiddies fueling the FUD while watching Takedown and inspiring themselves to eavesdrop on someone’s mobile communication while "commuting" in the park

The reality

- Anti virus vendors suffer from marketing myopia, they’ve simply fallen in love with their products, and we all know that once you fall in love it’s hard to become as pragmatic as you used to be before – sweet pain

- the majority of known mobile malware comes out of a Cabir Proof of Concept (PoC) publicly available code, that is the spreading routine within. Namely the current threat represents nothing more than a mobile malware family, and there’s no such thing as a perfect family

- Malware authors are too busy to efficiently play cat and mouse game and taking advantage of the about to reach 1B world wide Internet population.

- the end user MUST confirm the unknown Bluetooth connection, if she’s in discoverable mode, must confirm the execution of the executable from unknown source

- given that Symbian and Windows Mobile dominate the mobile OS space, a vulnerability in the systems is crucial

- Anti virus signatures are basically a reactive security protection

I once argued on the myth of anti virus vendors sharing every malware sample they came across, in between the "usefulness" of virus signatures in today's open source malware, and malware on demand world

How to protect yourself?

- be aware of the basics of mobile malware

- don't install applications from untrusted on-the-go sources

Do you need a personal anti-virus scanner for your mobile phone? No, you don't, but mobile operators need them on the gateway level, the rest is just your mobile operator differentiating its offering, positioning itself as a conscious one, and further fueling growth into the market – whether revenues are about to get spent on further R &D on mobile malware, or market development with other products is up to the vendors themselves.

It's your network operator who should be responsible for limiting the spread of potential epidemics, and charging a buck for a slight modification of Cabir's PoC spreading module, brings us back to the same old issue with open source malware, or malware of demand and anti virus signatures usefulness and recency of updates. My point, the responsibility for dealing with general and family based mobile malware, the one we're seeing today, should go to my mobile operator, not to myself getting infected and spreading the decease even further.

The average mobile phone user would start enjoying a provider's brand even more, if he's been talked into the huge dangers posed by mobile malware – from a marketing point of view he would even spread the word further while trying to let the other perceive him/her as a tech savvy individual with a fancy AV scanner on his couple hundred.

Targeted attacks have a huge potential though, while a mass sending of mobile malware would result in the mobile operator directly blocking it, and merely relaying on the end user to take care of their responsibilities. All you need is a wide spread mobile malware dissemination attempt, and then you'll witness your operator using his ownership powers to shock and awe you with its know how.

Wise investments are not always those that seems the most proactive ones, but the ones taking advantage of the momentum.

Remember, the best marketers don’t just respond profitably to the consumer’s needs, they create new markets. It’s the unspoken rule of the game.

What’s next? Anti virus software for your gaming device and music player, as well as for your IPv6 compatible fridge? For sure, but in the very, very long run. Meanwhile, be aware, don’t panic, and try to base your concerns on objective and unbiased sources only.

It used to be a moment in time when scareware and pay per install affiliate-based revenue sharing fraudulent and malicious networks used to dominate the threat landscape as the primary monetization vector courtesy of the bad guys where they’ve managed to successfully steal basically tens of thousands in fraudulent revenue by enticing users into installing and interacting with rogue and fake security software.

In this post I'll take a deeper look inside the YaBucks rogue and affiliate-network based scareware serving network that managed to affect thousands of users globally largely based on the number of affiliates that participated in it including to also provide technical details on its Internet-connected infrastructure with the idea to assist everyone in their cyber attack and cyber campaign attribution efforts.

It should be clearly noted that in today’s modern cybercrime ecosystem which is largely driven by the existence of bulletproof hosting providers which basically either ignore abuse notifications or on purposely launch rogue and fraudulent online hosting operations using their own resources or in combination with cloud-based service providers who unknowingly participate in such type of fraudulent and rogue bulletproof hosting schemes including actual malicious software spam and botnet C &C hosting we've continuing to observe an increase in the overall volume of these providers where we're also witnessing their use by both novice and experienced cybercriminals where the ultimate goal would be to increase the average time it takes for vendors organizations and researchers to take offline their rogue fraudulent and malicious campaigns.

In this post I'll discuss several of the high-profile bulletproof hosting providers that were active circa 2010 and I'll provide some actionable intelligence on the infrastructure behind them with the idea to assist everyone in their cyber attack and cyber campaign attribution efforts.

With spam continuing to proliferate globally that also includes the use of spam for serving malicious software largely populating a variety of botnets on a daily basis including the ever-growing use of client-side exploits for the purpose of affecting hundreds of thousands of users on a daily basis I’ve decided to take a peek inside a Russian-based managed spam service that let’s users launch massive and widespread spam campaigns in a DIY (do-it-yourself) fashion.

A Peek Inside the Earnings4u Managed Malware Distribution Service - An Analysis

Dear blog readers,

I’ve decided to offer an in-depth inside peek inside the Earnings4u managed malware distribution service circa 2010 with the idea to raise awareness on the ease of use and the actual trend where novice and experienced botnet masters can easily acquire the necessary seed population in terms of purchasing access to malware infected hosts which could be further used to spread their malicious software campaigns including spam and phishing campaigns.

With managed affiliate-network based revenue sharing schemes continuing to proliferate it shouldn’t be surprising that more cybercriminals are actually looking for ways to monetize access to their acquired through blackhat SEO including various other rogue and fraudulent techniques traffic including users who would be interested in offering managed and centralized ways for spreading other cybercriminal’s malicious releases in a systematic and efficient way leading to today’s modern cybercrime ecosystem reality where both novice and experienced cybercriminals rely on rogue and malicious affiliate-network based revenue sharing schemes for both revenue generation and the spreading of malicious software.

Nobody's safe today! Who can say for sure that his PC is notinfected?

The latest researches prove that 92% of all home PCs are under the threat of infection, the main source of which is still the Internet. The vast majority of Internet users fall for the bait of various trading companies and commercial websites which make large-scale distribution of viruses. Usually, these viruses get to inexperienced users through "free-of-charge" software products.

So, what is Spyware?

This is malevolent software whose aim is to supervise your actions when you are on-line.

What is eKerberos?

eKerberos is a sophisticated but easy to use software that utilises active protection strategy to eliminate security threats that common Antivirus programs miss.

Why is eKerberos better then standard antivirus programs?

Anti -virus & -spyware programs use their database to search for malicious code on your PC. Hackers know that and change the code of their Trojan-horses on a hourly basis making the code-check method obsolete. eKerberos algorithm monitors the activity of all programs that are installed on your PC and prevents any dangerous actions. Trojan horses and spyware programs have a common behaviour that differs them from safe software. eKerberos detects attempts to perform malicious actions, blocks them and performs a fuzzy search to find a match and securely cure your PC.

What threats does eKerberos protect from?

Keyloggers - these programs were intended to steal business related information by recording all the keystrokes you make on your keyboard. Right now keyloggers are mostly used to record the data that you enter in web-forms (passwords, personal details, credit-card information e.t.c.) and misuse it. Keyloggers are often installed by your family members and colleagues to spy on you. eKerberos monitors your system to prevent such activity and clears your system. Data theft - some Trojan horses search for specific files containing the information they need and send them to the owner of the virus. There is a small number of hosting centers where such data-storage can be hosted, they are mainly located in China and are all included in our database. eKerberos checks your outgoing traffic and prevents connections to dangerous addresses. Direct attacks - a lot of worms are always searching for open ports to break into PCs directly. eKerberos monitors your ports and defends them against intruders. Launches of malicious software - viruses and Trojan-horses often hide their code in standard programs like Internet explorer and execute malicious code. eKerberos instantly blocks the execution tracks the infected partitions of the files and cures them.

My Old Twitter Account - Sample Twitter Background Collages Circa 2010 - An Analysis

Dear blog readers,

I wanted to take the time and effort and elaborate more on my old [2]Twitter account circa 2010 in terms of what really happened and how I managed to accumulate approximately 11,000 followers on Twitter in less than three months prior to announcing that I'm joining Twitter on my personal blog.

Also for the record - users interested in obtaining access to my old Twitter account for research and reference purposes including to actually go through it can grab a copy of it from [3]here.

I’ve decided to share with everyone a series of photos courtesy of a publicly accessible CAPTCHA-solving service that also includes the breaking and direct bypassing of Google’s reCAPTCHA with the idea to raise awareness on the fact that in today’s modern cybercrime ecosystem the bad guys continue to outsource the CAPTCHA solving process to humans who would then systematically and semi-automatically attempt to solve as many CAPTCHAs as possible potentially earning a decent portion of revenue in the process and most importantly empowering today’s modern spam and blackhat SEO tools in terms of automated CAPTCHA solving and account registration services on some of today’s major Web properties.

I’ve decided to share some publicly obtainable and available screenshots of what appears to be idea to raise awareness on the fact that even the bad guys can suffer security breaches that also includes attacks from fellow researchers Law Enforcement and vendors including fellow cybercriminals.

Continuing the "going through my old threat intelligence research archives" blog post series

I’ve decided to share yet another compilation of Mod Bot which is a well known malicious software botnet release with some pretty interesting and sophisticated features.

Exposing a SQL Injection Capable IRC Malware Bot - An Analysis (2022-11-01 18:31)

Dear blog readers,

I’ve decided to share with everyone a screenshot which I took back in 2010 which basically demonstrates an IRC malware bot which is capable of executing SQL injection campaign using stolen or compromised access to malware-infected hosts where the actual C &C server activity takes place in IRC where the botnet master can basically send instructions to any of the botnet’s infected hosts for the purpose of having them execute and participate in a SQL injection attack that also includes scanning and reconnaissance capabilities.

Exposing a Malware Serving Client-Side Exploits Serving

Campaign at CNET's Download.com Abusing Input Validation Flaws - An Analysis (2022-11-01 18:58)

I took these screenshots in 2008.

Did you know that back in 2008 CNET's Download.com used to suffer from a major input validation flaw which the infamous back then RBN (Russian Business Network) used to exploit in terms of having automatically and rogue and bogus users registering on the Web site and posting iFrame injected comments which were in fact redirecting the Web site's users to a malware-

Did you know that a huge percentage of Rock Phish related campaigns are known to have been hosted on a fast-fluxed botnet infrastructure where the ultimate goal is to make them impossible to take offline or basically increase the average time it takes for vendors or researchers to attempt to take the domains offline?

In this post I'll share with everyone a sample portfolio of Rock Phish themed screenshots where the ultimate goal is to present my findings in the context of providing actionable intelligence on the fact that on the majority of occasions Rock Phish gang's campaigns continue to be hosted on a fast-fluxed botnet infrastructure.

Dear blog readers,

I’ve decided to share with everyone sample screenshots which I took back in 2010 while doing research in specific the malicious release’s capability to eavesdrop on email communications initiated from the hosts of the affected victims part of the botnet with some pretty interesting and sophisticated features where the actual botnet master behind the release has already managed to accumulate some pretty decent stolen and compromised SMTP and POP3 accounting information.

Back in 2009 I came across to a pretty interesting and easy to use sophisticated ZeuS crime-ware managed hosting service which was basically enticing users into becoming customers of a managed ZeuS crimeware service which was basically offering them everything they need to enter the world of cybercrime in specific managed crimeware releases.

Comments and Recommendations from Colleagues:

"Dancho Danchev has his pulse on the cyber criminal community. I can think of few people who have his experience, skills and understanding when it comes to cyber intelligence and understanding the cyber threat. I cannot recommend Dancho enough."

"I have been working in the security space for many years and for a very large part of that have been following the excellent research work that Dancho has been doing in identifying cyber criminals and doing complex analysis of highly advanced modern day malware attacks. Dancho is extremely well known in the security industry for the work he has done and continues to do. When we had the opportunity of collaborating with Dancho at Webroot, we didn't hesitate. Dancho has proven to deliver on a continuous basis for us and his work is simply phenomenal. I look forward to working with Dancho for many years to come."

"Dancho is an expert researcher who I've had the pleasure of working with on several hacker investigations for Taia Global clients. I consider Dancho one of the best and most insightful researchers working in InfoSec today."

"Dancho is one of those exceedingly rare security professionals with not only an eye for uncovering the root cause of an attack and the ability to examine it from multiple angles, but also explain his findings in a way that has a meaningful and direct impact on those tasked with defending against such attacks. I admire the depth of his analysis and his dogged determination to track back who the criminal operators are despite the dangers he could be exposed to. Dancho gets two-thumbs-up from me and I'd hire him in a heart-beat if he PageS ever makes it to the USA. In the meantime I'll keep on following his research, reading his blogs and looking forward to collaborating with him on future cyber crime investigations."

"I first knew Dancho when he was fresh out of college but already with a prodigious understanding of information security matters. He became one of the experts in the Security Clinic on ITsecurity.com, a site I founded and was publishing at the time; and he willingly gave free security help and advice to visitors to the site. Since those days I have watched both his career and knowledge grow in leaps and bounds until he is now, without any doubt, one of the world's leading experts on the shady world of cybercrime."

"Dancho is an exceptional information security professional; he continually goes the extra mile for clients and the security community. His knowledge and analysis in core areas as threat intelligence analysis, cybercrime counter intelligence and competitive intelligence research is outstanding. He also manages the most difficult task with ease, that of communicating this in an understandable and meaningful form for the community. Working with Dancho over several years has been highly productive, and beneficial."

China loves the U.S and guess what? Based on my most recent analysis on online influence and Chinese themed propaganda campaigns I’ve just intercepted a what appears to be a live

Chinese-themed online influence and propaganda campaign targeting the NSA including the U.S mass surveillance campaigns internationally including the active use of variety of tags and automatically registered Twitter accounts.

Although many of the accounts appear to be currently suspended the earliest tweets part of the campaign date back to July, 2022 and the campaign appears to be currently and still ongoing.

Let’s take a deeper look inside the campaign using both publicly obtainable and accessible

Twitter analytics tools including various OSINT techniques and try to shed as much light into the campaign as possible including to actually attempt to offer as much actionable intelligence on the actual Twitter accounts in use including the actual list of rogue and bogus and automatically registered Twitter accounts known to have been involved in the campaign.

Sample screenshots and images part of the campaign include:

三恶霸

贸易霸凌

美西方一直奉为“圭臬”的“市场经济”已经沦为美国谋取私利的幌子。美国不仅彻底违背市场经济学说的基本定义、根本原则，甚至连搞经济、做生意的起码规矩、伦理底线都一概逾越、背弃，已经成为多边经贸体系的最大破坏者。

资本霸道

美国频频以国家安全之名对外发动网络攻击，遏制他国网络技术发展，粗暴破坏全球网络治理体系。面对美式网络霸权，越来越多的国家已经认清其本质并予以抵制。携手构建网络空间命运共同体逐渐成为全球共识。

Happy Holidays! (2022-12-05 09:52)

Dear blog readers,

It's been a while since I've last posted a high-quality personal message on my personal blog but the first thing that I wanted to say is big thanks to everyone who's been following and is following me and continues to follow me and read my research here where the pleasure to produce high-quality and never-discussed and published before research is all mine and will continue to be.

What I've been up to? I've been basically multi-tasking on several fronts which I'm doing my best to continue fighting the good fight in terms of fighting and responding to the latest underground ecosystem cybercrime-friendly market propositions by actually profiling them and making sure that my research and analysis reaches all the appropriate parties that also includes the general public.

In terms of work I'm currently acting as a DNS Threat Researcher at WhoisXML API where the pleasure to personally thank the team and the CEO for bringing me on board is all mine where my primary responsibilities include the production of white papers on the topic of cybercrime and general cybercrime and threat actor type of research.

Some of my current projects include:

- [3]https://offensive-warfare.com

- [4]https://cybercrime-forum-dataset.org

- [5]https://osint-marketplace.org

- [6]https://unit-123.org

I've also recently updated the BIO on my Twitter and LinkedIn accounts and I've been also pretty active on Facebook and Mastodon including Xakep.bg's Discord server where I recently held a presentation at Cyber Security Talks Bulgaria and I'll soon feature the actual photos and video from the event. I've also recently claimed my Google Knowledge Panel and believe it or not Google thinks that I'm a researcher which is great news and I'm honored to also have my Twitter and LinkedIn accounts featured on the front page so thanks a lot for reading me and for visiting my blog including to read my research.

Stay tuned!

Exposing the "Data Leaks" Paradise - An Analysis (2022-12-19 15:27)

In a world dominated by a countless number of malicious and fraudulent cyber threat actor adversaries including the rise of the "penetration testing" crowd whose ultimately goal is to actually lower down the entry barriers into the World of Information Security potentially resulting in thousands of ethical and unethical penetration testing aware users across the globe who have the capacity and the potential to target thousands of legitimate Web sites in an attempt to take advantage of the "low-hanging fruit" it should be clearly noted that throughout the past couple of years a new generation of wannabe hackers and information security enthusiasts began to take place namely the rise of the data breach and data leaks community within the Information Security Industry whose ultimately goal is to actually obtain access to compromised and potentially leaked database of confidential records including high-profile data leaks in the context of government-based leaked data that will be later on eventually traded and attempted to be taken advantage of in the context of launching targeted phishing and malware-spreading campaigns potentially affecting hundreds of thousands of users in the process.

Sample uses of these stolen and compromised databases includes:

- setting the foundation for a successful spear-phishing campaigns

- setting the foundations for successful targeted malware and exploits serving campaigns

- setting the foundations for successful widespread spam and botnet propagation campaigns

- attempting to monetize the stolen database by selling access it to

- attempting to use double layer monetization for the stolen database by attempting to sell access to it including to the actual owners of the database who might be interested in obtaining a copy of it

- biased exclusivity and double layer monetization combination where the attacker might only sell the database to its actual owner and actually get rid of it once they receive the payment

The very notion that cybercriminals including white hat security experts and cybercrime fighters will eventually attempt to obtain access to for instance a compromised cybercrime forum for the purpose of exposing the personal details of its users that also include to possibly track down and geolocate including to actually profile and prosecute some of its members should be definitely considered as an old-fashioned trend in the actual fight against cybercrime online with more users and researchers joining the fight including the actual cybercriminals who might take additional measures to actually protect and prevent possible data leaks including various other OPSEC (Operational Security) type of measures in terms of positioning their cybercrime-friendly forum community as a invite-only or actually launching it in a a vetted and invite-only fashion.

What’s should be clearly noted is that with the mainstream media continuing to raise awareness on the existence of high-profile hacking groups and hackers including the rise of the Anonymous crowd it should be clearly noted that wannabe and potential hackers would continue trying to steal the necessary media attention and actual "know-how" from high-profile hacking groups and individual hackers involved in high-profile data leaks and data breaches.

I believe that on the majority of occasions it’s just ransomware that’s making the headlines including its way into corporate networks thanks to the so called initial access brokers who on the majority of occasions are known to have been also outsourcing their hacking and network compromise needs to third-parties who would basically do an Attack Surface Reconnaissance on the Web and will attempt to find a weak spot into the corporate network of the targeted victim but would also attempt to data mine and harvest publicly accessible and obtainable email address accounts for the purpose of doing active social engineering reconnaissance that also includes the attempt to obtain accounting data belonging to these company individuals including to launch spear phishing attack campaigns against their infrastructure in an attempt to obtain access to their email address accounts home PCs and networks including related services ultimately attempting to compromise the security of the targeted network and the company in question.

Happy Holidays From The (Not) Republic of Bulgaria - An Analysis - Part Two

Can you slap it? Do you know that your degree of education is proportional with the price size of your t-shirt which means that we’re not interested in counting that much I mean the almighty dollar which you can’t behold yourself to all of its mightiness? "Give me a moron and I’ll beat him" instead of "Give me an IP and I’ll move the earth" type of mentality? Are you a retard or are you a moron or are you a dipshit where the word cannot really behold itself to its almighty awesomeness? Try the two of these as you’re only a low waged moron that cannot really count anything between one or two which means the actual times you’ll get slapped by someone who’ll eventually find out and seek your responsibility for your general moronic attitude. It means that you’re a retard.

Dear blog readers,

In need of a decent example of a sophisticated spam tool that’s truly capable to bypass any web site’s anti-spam defense including basically any known CAPTCHA including to also automate the process to the point where the actual bad guys behind the infamous Xedant human emulator are truly capable of causing widespread spam havoc internationally? Think about the Xedant human emulator tool circa 2008.

With basic iFrame injecting scripts making their rounds back in 2008 including their use and participation in actual crowd-sourced DDoS attack campaigns internationally I’ve decided to share with everyone a sample screenshot of a sample iFrame DDoS script that was actually back in 2008.

Antivirus 2009 Protection

What is Antivirus 2009 Protection

Total Antivirus Protection is one of the most hi-tech, visible achievements in the development of protection software all over the world. Its main aim is to relieve you of dangerous programs, which destroy your system.

You need this program because it's unique, effective and able to compete with many well known large software companies. It certainly should be installed on your PC - and you will forget about Spyware and Adware wreckers. This is the best protection software of today among other existing, so use free scan.

About 92% of all PCs are infected with threats that can't be identified by most security programs.

Nobody's safe today! Who can say for sure that his PC is notinfected?

The latest researches prove that 92% of all home PCs are under the threat of infection, the main source of which is still the Internet. The vast majority of Internet users fall for the bait of various trading companies and commercial websites which make large-scale distribution of viruses. Usually, these viruses get to inexperienced users through "free-of-charge" software products.

So, what is Spyware?

This is malevolent software whose aim is to supervise your actions when you are on-line.

- As soon as it is noticed that you are Internet amateur who likes to browse boundless open spaces of the Internet, you will immediately receive a huge heap of different information (Commercials, Popups and just Spam) from inside of your PC!
- Spyware may harm your PC efficiency and slow the speed of transfer into the Internet.
- They penetrate into your PC from websites you visit, spam, even with hidden additions of license programs you had installed. The place of infection always remains not defined. Some Antivirus or Firewall programs cannot find it at all.

Why choose Antivirus 2009 Protection?

Antivirus 2009 Protection is a leading program worldwide:

- This unique program won an award for being first Firewall-like protection.

What is eKerberos?

eKerberos is a sophisticated but easy to use software that utilises active protection strategy to eliminate security threats that common Antivirus programs miss.

Why is eKerberos better then standard antivirus programs?

Anti -virus & -spyware programs use their database to search for malitious code on your PC. Hackers know that and change the code of their Trojan-horses on a hourly basis making the code-check method obsolete. eKerberos algorithm monitors the activity of all programs that are installed on your PC and prevents any dangerous actions. Trojan horses and spyware programs have a common behaviour that differs them from safe software. eKerberos detects attempts to perform malicious actions, blocks them and performs a fuzzy search to find a match and securely cure your PC.

Keyloggers - these programs were intended to steal business related information by recording all the keystrokes you make on your keyboard. Right now keyloggers are mostly used to record the data that you enter in web-forms (passwords, personal details, credit-card information e.t.c.) and misuse it. Keyloggers are often installed by your family members and colleagues to spy on you. eKerberos monitors your system to prevent such activity and clears your system. Data theft - some Trojan horses search for specific files containing the information they need and send them to the owner of the virus. There is a small number of hosting centers where such data-storage can be hosted, they are mainly located in China and are all included in our database. eKerberos checks your outgoing traffic and prevents connections to dangerous addresses. Direct attacks - a lot of worms are always searching for open ports to break into PCs directly. eKerberos monitors your ports and defends them against intruders. Launches of malicious software - viruses and Trojan-horses often hide their code in standard programs like Internet explorer and execute malicious code. eKerberos instantly blocks the execution tracks the infected partitions of the files and cures them.

Cyber Intelligence – Second Edition

by Dancho Danchev

https://ddanchev.blogspot.com | Email:
dancho.danchev@hush.com

I'm also acting as a DNS Threat Reseaarcher at WhoisXML API.

It's been a while since I've last posted a quality video on YouTube and I've decided that this is going to be a pretty long and decent introduction into what I've been up to online since the 90's up to present day where I'm an internationally recognized cybercrime researcher security blogger and threat intelligence analyst. In this rather long video I'll walk you through my experience as a hacker enthusiast during the 90's up to present day and I'll also discuss in-depth a variety of personal projects including to offer a general discussion and overview on a variety of key topics that are currently active within the security industry including my personal career such as for instance.

Among my key accomplishments include my "lawful surveillance" and "lawful interceprtion" experience as teenage hacker the production of the popular Astalavista Security Newsletter circa 2003-2006 including the "take-down" of the Koobface botnet [MP3] including a participation in Top Secret GCHQ program called "Lovely Horse" including regular appearance in major news publications for interview and expert opinion including Techmeme, ZDNet, CNN, PCWorld, SCMagazine, TheRegister, NYTimes, CNET, ComputerWorld, H +Magazine and regular security and research presentation appearance at major security events at GCHQ, Interpol, InfoSec Europe, RSA Europe and CyberCamp.

I'm an internationally recognized expert in the field of cybercrime fighting and threat intelligence gathering having actively pioneered my own methodlogy for processing threat intelligence which leads me to a successful set of hundreas of high-quality anaysis and research articles published at the industry's leading threat intelligence blog - ZDNet's Zero Day, Dancho Danchev's Mind Streams of Information Security Knowledge and Webroot's Threat Blog with his research featured in Techmeme, ZDNet, CNN, PCWorld, SCMagazine, TheRegister, NYTimes, CNET, ComputerWorld, H+Magazine currently producing threat intelligence at the industry's leading threat intelligence blog - Dancho Danchev's - Mind Streams of Information Security Knowledge.

With my research featured at RSA Europe, CyberCamp, InfoSec, GCHQ and Interpol I continue to actively produce threat intelligence at the industry's leading threat intelligence blog - Dan-cho Danchev's - Mind Streams of Information Security Knowledge publishing a diverse set of hundreds of high-quality research analysis detailing the malicious and fraudulent activities at

Group Security Newsletter and received the necessary support and guidance in the context of making this high-quality security publication happen including everyone in the U.S that I know and have worked with in the context of fighting cybercrime where I wanted to say big thanks to everyone who ever approached me and said “keep up the good work” and “keep it coming” in the context of motivating me to continue doing my research and continue to publish high-quality research articles and proper cyber threat actor attribution research and analysis including the following people:

following the basic methodology that an “OSINT conducted today is a tax payer’s buck saved somewhere”.

I owe everyone a big one and I’m doing my best both personally and professionally to return the favour. Bare with me.

Stay tuned!

The time has come for me to introduce myself professionally through the prism of the opinion of my fellow colleagues and friends from the industry.

Here are some sample recommendations which I’ve received from friends colleagues and partners throughout the years with the idea to illustrate my experience and expertise in the field such as for instance:

“I have been working in the security space for many years and for a very large part of that have been following the excellent research work that Dancho has been doing in identifying cyber criminals and doing complex analysis of highly advanced modern day malware attacks.

Dancho is extremely well known in the security industry for the work he has done and continues to do. When we had the opportunity of collaborating with Dancho at Webroot, we didn’t hesitate.

Dancho has proven to deliver on a continuous basis for us and his work is simply phenomenal.

I look forward to working with Dancho for many years to come.”

— Jacques Erasmus, was Dancho's client

"Dancho is an expert researcher who I've had the pleasure of working with on several hacker investigations for Taia Global clients. I consider Dancho one of the best and most insightful researchers working in InfoSec today."

— Jeffrey Carr, CEO, Taia Global, Inc., managed Dancho indirectly at Non-disclosure agreement

"Dancho Danchev has his pulse on the cyber criminal community. I can think of few people who have his experience, skills and understanding when it comes to cyber intelligence and understanding the cyber threat. I cannot recommend Dancho enough."

— Lance Spitzner, President, The Honeynet Project, worked with Dancho at Non-disclosure

"Dancho is one of those exceedingly rare security professionals with not only an eye for uncovering the root cause of an attack and the ability to examine it from multiple angles, but also explain his findings in a way that has a meaningful and direct impact on those tasked with defending against such attacks. I admire the depth of his analysis and his dogged determination to track back who the criminal operators are despite the dangers he could be exposed to.

19435

Dancho gets two-thumbs-up from me and I'd hire him in a heart-beat if he ever makes it to the

USA. In the meantime I'll keep on following his research, reading his blogs and looking forward to collaborating with him on future cyber crime investigations."

— Gunter Ollmann, Vice President of Research, Damballa, Inc., was with another company when working with Dancho at Non-disclosure agreement

"Dancho is an exceptional information security professional; he continually goes the extra mile for clients and the security community. His knowledge and analysis in core areas as threat intelligence analysis, cybercrime counter Intelligence and competitive intelligence research is outstanding. He also manages the most difficult task with ease, that of communicating this in an understandable and meaningful form for the community. Working with Dancho over several years has been highly productive, and beneficial."

— Jart Armin, Editor, HostExploit, was with another company when working with Dancho at

Non-disclosure agreement

"I first knew Dancho when he was fresh out of college but already with a prodigious understanding of information security matters. He became one of the experts in the Security Clinic on ITsecurity.com, a site I founded and was publishing at the time; and he willingly gave free security help and advice to visitors to the site. Since those days I have watched both his career and knowledge grow in leaps and bounds until he is now, without any doubt, one of the world's leading experts on the shady world of cybercrime."

— Kevin Townsend, Founder/Editor, ITsecurity.com, worked directly with Dancho at ITsecurity.com

“Dancho is a veritable mine of information, particularly on subjects like the ones he blogs about, such as spam and malware campaigns and the actors behind them. I am an avid reader of his, and also have met Dancho at a few conferences that we’ve both attended. I’ve found him to be extremely friendly, and always ready to explain anything he’s been working on. Were I organising a conference, I would definitely send him an invite.”

— Jamie Riden, Senior Consultant, NGS Secure, was with another company when working with Dancho at Non-disclosure agreement “While rebuilding the site security and fraud team at a leading online web site, threats and rapid evolution in the online security space necessitated I get up to speed quickly, and with more than a modicum of depth and breadth of understanding of current trends and risks in the cyber security realm. After spending considerable time building an information network of the most germane, relevant, and useful sources, a common thread emerged from the chatter of activity and updates – “Dancho Danchev”. As I poured over security publications, cyber-security journals, blogs, and security vendor sites, I continued to see Dancho cited and acknowledged as the security researcher and expert who “broke the story” or “tipped off users to the nvulnerabilities" or "alerted the community to threat vectors" for major events. Dancho has voluntarily shared critical information on what the crooks are up to and has been an invaluable and much appreciated resource. Dancho's passion for his work is reflected in his genuine desire to quash the "bad guys" activities and share as much actionable information as he possibly can. I highly recommend Dancho to any organization seeking an top-notch expert and passionate evangelist of online security practices."

Here's a brief interview with me which I gave to the original and upcoming re-launch of the infamous Astalavista.box.sk project:

Dear Dancho – can you please introduce yourself and the latest Box.sk project? Can you please elaborate more on your experience in fighting cybercrime including your contributions to the threat intelligence gathering community and the U.S Security Industry?

My name is Dancho Danchev. I've been an independent contractor doing OSINT cybercrime fighting and threat intelligence gathering for over a decade and I'm currently running one of the security industry's leading security publications which is my personal blog where I've established the foundations for an efficient and relevant OSINT and law enforcement methodology in terms of fighting and disrupting cybercrime internationally which led me to pursue a successful career with several high-profile U.S based companies and organizations throughout the past decade following a successful career as an ex-hacker throughout the 90’s. My daily routine consists of digging deep inside the cyber warfare realm in the context of responding to and tracking down high-profile nation-state sponsored or targeted malware campaigns and cybercrime incidents and keeping track of the bad guys as usual with the idea to contribute to the overall demise of cybercrime internationally and to actually contribute to the U.S Intelligence Community with operational and tactical intelligence including to actively support U.S Law Enforcement on its way to track down and respond to cybercrime events globally.

My primary motivation for re-lauching a project on the original Astalavista.box.sk is to “show them how it’s done” in the context of reaching out to a broader audience in the context of offering practical tactical and operational advice in the World of cyber warfare information warfare operations and to present hardcore and never-published before potentially classified and sensitive material in the world of the U.S Intelligence Community and U.S Law Enforcement and to actually find a constructive and relevant way to say “hi” and “we’re back” to a loyal base of users globally and to actually find a way to “keep the spirit” of the Scene the way we know it.

I’ve planned a set of new high-profile projects which I intend to communicate to our audience to a systematic and periodic basis with the idea to offer an insightful and unique peek inside the Scene the way we know it.

What are some of the currently running Box.sk projects and what do you have planned for the future?

We’re currenty running a high-profile and extremely popular WordPress blog including a cyber security and hacking forum community and we’ve recently launched an extremely popular Call for Papers and Call for Innovation part of the WHGDG (World Hacker Global Domination Group) franchise where we’re currently soliciting content in a variery of areas and on a variety of topics including a recently launched IRC server including an extremely popular search engine for hackers and security experts including the upcoming launch of our flagship publicly accessible product called Project Cybertronics VR for Hackers and Security Experts including an upcoming high-profile YouTube broadcast featuring folks and experts from the security industry and the Scene.

We’ve also lined up a variety of high-profile and upcoming community-driven and publicly accessible products and services and we’ll be definitely looking forward to issuing periodic updates on their public and proprietary availability. “If it’s going to be massive it better be good” in the context of re-surrecting and re-launching the Scene’s and the security industry’s most popular Web site for hackers and security experts internationally.

Among the key features of the portal include a flagship search engine for hackers and security experts which can be accesses at – and is currently indexing over 3M web sites for hackers and security experts.

What do you think about U.S National Security in a post-Snowden world?

I’m a firm believer that building communities around leaked and classified data might not be the best way to actually communicate its value and actually reach out to a wider audience potentially blowing the whistle on currently active and sensitive and classified cyber surveillance and cyber intelligence type of programs part of the portfolio of services courtesy of the U.S Intelligence Community. I’m also positive that a new set of copy-cats will eventually emerge trying to potentially steal operational and tactical know-how from the leaked data potentially setting the foundations for their own private and proprietary cyber surveillance and cyber intelligence products.

In terms of U.S National Security in a post-Snowden world I believe that a specific set of international fan-base or actual clusters of supporters cannot really do much harm besides raising awareness on the actual state of cyber surveillance and cyber intelligence programs and their scale and reach internationally and can actually assist in building a more sophisticated internal security systems in place.

The current state of U.S National Security has to do with a specific set of post 9/11 contractor base which are truly making an impact globally by launching new companies actually hiring people to work for them and actually are fully capable of disrupting and undermining today's modern and sophisticated cybercrime-driven online activity that also includes various cyber jihad sentiments globally. Case in point would be ISIS which the U.S Cyber Command has specifically targeted and could be possibly used as the most relevant and recent example of fraudulent online cyber jihad activity up to present day in the context of a large scale international campaign which basically attracted the U.S attention which resulted in a variety of campaigns targeting pro-ISIS infrastructure and its supporters.

How can you best describe your experience in tracking down and monitoring of the Koobface botnet?

It took me two and a half years of active daily monitoring of the Koobface botnet to actually come up and properly provide the necessary technical research and analysis behind the actual working of the botnet and actually allow me to track down and publicly distribute a variety of personally identifiable information on one of the key members of the group which at some point resulted in having Facebook's net-space IP block redirected to my personal blog including to actually have a personal message embedded on tens of thousands of infected hosts globally personally greeting me for my research into the Koobface botnet. At some point my research into the group's whereabouts became the primary information source on the group's activities internationally which resulted in a series of blog posts on the topic and greatly motivated me to continue my research into the way the botnet worked at the time through the systematic and daily publication of high-profile and never-published before technical analysis and research on the botnet's la

What's the current state of the fight against cybercrime globally?

While we're currently observing a lot of newly popping-up vendors and organizations who are actually good at tracking down and responding to cybercrime incidents and activities it should be clearly noted that high-profile think-tanks including independent researchers organizations and vendors who have been tracking down cybercrime incidents and profiling cybercrime activities for decades should be easily considered a recommended reading in terms of their recently and historical published research in this area.

It should be also clearly noted that wide-spread cooperation campaigns between the academic commercial and private sector are already taking place potentially undermining and contributing to the overall lowering down of cybercrime activity globally.

What should be done in the broader context of fighting cybercrime internationally is a currently ongoing OSINT and Law Enforcement operation similar to my recently launched crowd-sourced OSINT and Law Enforcement operation called “Uncle George” including my most recently published high-profile and available online for free Cybercrime Forum Data Set for 2019 which you can download and process and potentially reach out to me in terms of the actual enrichment and tracking and shutting down process.

How can you best describe the ongoing intersection between law enforcement and the U.S Intelligence Community in the context of launching offensive lawful surveillance campaigns?

Case in point is the recent take down and hijacking of the primary domain for Encrochat a proprietary encrypted mobile solution? Do you think Dutch law enforcement basically abused its technological “know-how” and expertise to target a commercial encrypted mobile solutions provider?

This is something that’s extremely important in the context of fighting cybercrime but can definitely raise someone's eyebrows across the World in the context of preventing and responding to cybercrime and cyber jihad incidents globally in particular the intersection between U.S Law Enforcement and the U.S Intelligence Community. Case in point is the Dutch Intelligence Service which is quite experienced in fighting tracking down and actually responding to cybercrime and cyber jihad incidents globally which is a great example of the intersection between law enforcement and a country's Intelligence Agencies globally. Case in point is Encrochat which is basically a commercial enterprise which was successfully taken offline thanks to a co-operation between the Dutch Intelligence Service and Law Enforcement internationally which eventually led to the direct compromise of the primary command and control infrastructure of the company and the actual interception of ongoing messages and communication.

Do you think that the launch of U.S Cyber Command is a step in the right direction? Do you think that publicly sharing proprietary malware releases on VirusTotal is an OPSEC violation? How do you think the U.S Cyber Command can better perform in the context of today's modern offensive cyber warfare arms race?

Successfully positioning a major U.S based and publicly accessible organization for the purpose of fighting to and responding to cybercrime and cyber attack incidents is a step in the right direction. It should be clearly evident that with the U.S Cyber Command looking to expand and extend its industry outreach campaigns and is actually bothering to share proprietary releases which can be clearly found in a huge number of public and private malware repositories thanks to third-party researchers and vendors this is definitely a step in the right direction. In the broader context of fighting cybercrime and responding to cyber jihad and cyber warfare campaigns and incidents globally.

You used to work on Astalavista.com one of Box.sk's primary competitors throughout 2003-2006? What's your impression for running and managing the portal? What really took place when it got hacked?

I used to run and manage Astalavista.com which was the primary competitor of the original Astalavista.box.sk throughout 2003-2006 while I was studying in the Netherlands which greatly helped me make impact internationally and actually helped me pay the bills at the time. My primary responsibilities were to manage and issue daily updates to the security directory including the security news section including the production of a highly popular and high-traffic volume Security Newsletter where I was also responsible for interviewing people from the Scene and the Security Industry.

My other responsibilities included the overall look of the portal including the introduction of new sections including to actually manage and run advertising inventory where I was responsible for bringing more advertisers on board.

Is it true that you're running one of the security industry's most popular security publications?

How did you originally launched the project? What's the current state of the project?

I've been been running my personal Dancho Danchev's Blog since December, 2005 while I was still working or https://astalavista.com acting as a Managing Director of the portal where I was busy responsible for the daily updates of the Security Directory including the Security News section including the introduction of new

What's your attitude towards "4th party collection?

As this has been my primary area of occupation throughout the last couple of years with the results of my research published at my personal blog I believe that 4th party collection is largely driven by a specific set of folks and experts who are actually capable of making an impact and causing widespread damage across the cybercrime ecosystem internationally. Case in point is my most recently launched Law Enforcement and OSINT operation called "Uncle George" where I've managed to publicly process approximately 1M web sites from major and leading online cybercrime-friendly forum communities with the idea to assist U.S Law Enforcement and the U.S Intelligence Community on its way to enrich and actually process the data set potentially disrupting the cybercrime-friendly forum communities behind the campaign including to actually track down and prosecute the cybercriminals behind these campaigns.

Do you believe that an over-populated security industry means lower OPSEC for high-profile operations?

I think that as we're continuing to witness the emergence and the existence of new cybercrime and OSINT researchers and analysts joining the security industry which could actually make the fight against cybercrime ever easier in case these researchers get invited into private mailing lists and private invite-only communities. I don't necessarily think that an over-populated security industry means lower OPSEC for high-profile operations in case everyone involved in a specific campaign or operation is keeping track of its sources and sources of information.

Who's running the show in 2020? What can best describe a successful "4th party collection" or virtual SIGINT operation? Who's running the show in terms of fighting cybercrime online?

I'm currently observing the usual deal of research done by high-profile and well-known cybercrime researchers and security experts that also includes vendors including a great deal of research done by novice researchers entering the cybercrime research ecosystem. In terms of a successful "4th party collection" I can best describe the process as a combination of Technical Collection OSINT analysis and actual enrichment and actual U.S Law Enforcement and U.S Intelligence Community outreach where the ultimate goal would be to track down the prosecute the cybercriminals behind these campaigns.

Is it true that we live in an utopian World where North Korea and Iran-originating cyber attacks are basically launched by anything but nation-state actors namely Generation Y individuals who’re online starting to embrace new technologies meaning that “everything’s in order”?

I can confirm an evident trend where the mainstream news media is over-hyping the use of remote access tools which in reality are good old fashioned trojan horses circa the 90’s in terms of launching targeted or widespread malicious software serving campaigns. Based on my research and analysis it should be clearly evident that both North Korea and Iran are lacking the necessary technical and operational “know-how” to launch or participate in high-profile campaigns making it easier for these parties to outsource their cyber warfare or malicious software research and development needs to a third-party which could be for instance Russia.

Do you believe that corrupt and potentially compromised North Korean online agents are actually doing more harm than good by participation in cyber warfare campaigns using techniques and methodologies that were common in use throughout the 90’s namely trojan horses and various other lawful surveillance tools?

I’m clearly observing an increase in such type of “rogue agent” type of activity where North Korea or Iran-based hackers are actually directly undermining the OPSEC of their country’s offensive or defensive cyber warfare operations in terms of actually signaling trends and various other indicators which could prove crucial in a possible attribution campaign or actual assessment of a specific country's understanding of offensive and defensive cyber warfare.

Were you surprised that you participated in a Top Secret GCHQ program monitoring hackers on Twitter called "Lovely Horse"? How do you think you made the list?

This was quite a surprise and it was in fact a privilege and an honor to have made the list with my old Twitter account where I was busy contributing with research and various other type of activity announcements on a daily basis while working for my previous empower which is Webroot. I think I made the list based on my research and it would be definitely a privilege and an honor to learn more and actually find out more about related Top Secret or Classified program where I've participated with my research.

What's the current state of your currently ongoing law enforcement and OSINT operation

"Uncle George"?

The current state of my currently ongoing Law Enforcement and OSINT operation called "Uncle George" is an active cooperation between several researchers who approached me including a vendor in terms of enriching the actual data set potentially helping me reach out to U.S Law Enforcement on my way to assist U.S Law Enforcement on its way to track down and prosecute the cybercriminals behind these campaigns. Users interested in joining my currently ongoing

Law Enforcement and OSINT operation “Uncle George” can do it here.

Dear blog readers,

I've recently stumbled upon a pretty interesting and worth mentioning malicious software and botnet spam and malicious software serving campaign that can be best described as a "PDF botnet" where the ultimate idea for both propagation and infection is the active utilization of

PDF files which are exclusively hosted on compromised or on purposely malicious and fraudulent rogue and bogus infrastructure.
